A RAILROAD WAR.

Conflict Between the Gangs in Chicago.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, September 16.—The fight between the Western Indiana, who are attempting to cross the Michigan Southern and other tracks at Sixteenth street, and the city, on the part of the property owners who are alleged to oppose the crossing, still continues. Attempts were made by the Western Indiana gang of trackmen at intervals during last night, but each time they were attacked, stoned and driven away by a crowd of 250 men, most of them roughs, the police, under Lieut. Shaack, not even attempting to prevent the riot, but simply contenting themselves with advising the men to quit work, Messrs. Stewart and Richardson, of the railroad company, were both badly injured by the flying missiles, the former receiving a terrible cut in the left temple, and the latter being struck with a stone in the breast. The mob was made up, not of property-owners, of whom very few took a hand in the lawless proceedings, but of roughs, plug-uglies and boys. The attorneys of the Western Indiana appeared before Judge Jamison, of the Circuit Court, this morning, and filed an application for attachments against Mayor Harrison, Commissioner Walter and Superintendent of Police O'Donnell, to answer to a charge of contempt of court in violating the injunction secured by the Western Indiana, which restrains the city from making any attempt to oppose the crossing and laying of tracks by the railroad company. Numerous counsel were present and the case was argued at length. The Court entered a rule that the parties above mentioned shall appear on Saturday morning and show cause why they shall not be held for contempt.

THE DISTURBANCE QUELLED.

CHICAGO, September 16.—The scene of disturbance is deserted this morning, and all the proceedings have been transferred to the courts. The contempt case against Mayor Harrison, brought because he instructed the city police not to protect the railroad company in their track-laying, has been put off.

CHINESE RELATIONS.

The Official Gazette publishes an account of the reception of the Chinese Embassador, Marquis Tseng, by the Czar. The Marquis said the Emperor of China sincerely wishes a treaty between the two countries could be arranged in a spirit of harmony and justice. The Czar replied that his desires were similar. Unfortunately the Chinese Government had not hitherto corresponded with his wishes, but he was pleased at the release of Chung How, late Embassador of China, and requested the Marquis Tseng to hasten to submit proposals to Vongiers for the conclusion of a treaty.

Turkey.

LONDON, September 16.—A Constantinople dispatch says the late Cabinet wished Turkey to yield on the Montenegrin question, and the Sultan consented. Thereupon Said Pasha, by means of his great influence in the palace, frightened the Sultan into resistance to Europe. The Sultan is now surrounded by a clique who are utterly ignorant of European politics. Riza Pasha has resigned, having refused to play a double game. This dispatch when first sent was stopped by the Censorship.

Germany.

LONDON, September 16.—A correspondent at Berlin says Bismarck's appointment as Minister of Trade and Commerce was arranged to give him power to bring about certain new taxes.

Special dispatches from Berlin say the Government perseveres in the intention of proposing a subsidy of several million marks for a line of steamers to Australia and the South Seas.

Egypt.

CAIRO, September 16.—The condition of the river Nile causes much anxiety. It is rising unsatisfactorily, and several weeks late. The inundation is lower than at the corresponding period of 1879. Irrigation, however, proceeds well. There are some complaints from the interior that the cotton crop has suffered, but to what extent is not known.

France.

PARIS, September 16.—The imports into France for the eight months ending August 31 show an increase compared with the corresponding period of 1879 of 250,000,000 francs. Exports increased 108,700,000 francs during the same time. The increase in imports is almost exclusively in food, and the increase in exports mainly articles of manufacture. Total imports exceed exports 109,800,000 francs.

Resolutions were adopted recommending rolls of merit and a system of moral reward for those firemen who perform acts of bravery. The report was adopted recommending the introduction of chemical engines and other means of extinguishing fire with but little water. A report favoring the payment of privilege tax paid by insurance companies to towns for the formation of a permanent fund for the benefit of disabled firemen was adopted.

MOB RULE.

The Police Defied in Milwaukee and a Building Attacked.

MILWAUKEE, September 16.—Last night a mob of several hundred men and boys made an attack upon the rink, one of the largest and finest buildings of its class in the country, and razed it to the ground. The police did not interfere, and it was carted off piecemeal. The city has had trouble in getting the lessee to surrender his lease in order that an exhibition building might be built on the ground, which is owned by the city.

These were the Vicomte De Bondy, Baron Faverest De Kerbrech, Lieutenant-Colornel of the First Regiment of Chasseurs d' Afrique, and Capt. De La Chere, of the Eighteenth Dragoons.

The Crops.

WASHINGTON, D. C., September 16.—The returns of September 1 regarding the wheat crop at the harvest give the preliminary estimate of the crop, but there are two investigations yet to be made before the formal estimate will be issued. The September estimate this year gives the condition as ninety, against ninety-two in 1879 and 87 in 1878. This estimate relates to quantity and quality, and does not take into consideration the increase of acreage. Condition of potatoes, as reported September 1, shows a decline within the month of eight per cent as compared with the report of September 1, 1879. There is a loss of 5 per cent. Buckwheat—The average for the whole country is four per cent less than last year at the same date.

A Fatal Explosion.

POTTSVILLE, September 16.—An explosion of sulphur occurred this morning at Heeksher & Co.'s Kohinoor Colliery, near Shenandoah, by which Richard Fresize, inside foreman, John Hargraves, fire boss, and William Marrutes, Dennis Coogan and John Coogan, miners, were seriously and Frank Temple, miner, slightly burned. The men have all been taken out of the mine except John Coogan, who is no doubt fatally injured.

Locked Up.

For some time prior to July last Emil Feige was in the employ of Emma Sandhoff, manufacturer and dealer in cigars at No. 318 Market street as salesman and collector. In the early part of July and while her bookkeeper was absent Feige called on Mrs. Sandhoff and requested her to sign a receipt in full for all demands against him, which she did. Recently while causing her periodical collections to be made she discovered that Feige had collected $94, for which sum he had made no return and which he had appropriated to his own use.

She therefore informed the police, and this morning Officer Dan O'Connell arrested Feige on Market street, in the vicinity of his late employer's store. He was locked up in the Chestnut Street Station, and Mrs. Sandhoff swore out a warrant against him at the Four Courts.

EAST ST. LOUIS.

James Curtis, a carpenter living in East St. Louis, was some time ago arrested for not supporting his wife. He was ordered by the court to pay a certain amount each week for the maintenance of his spouse and has not done so. He was arrested this morning by Sheriff Healy for contempt.

John Burns and Christ Heidenberger, who were arrested a few days ago by Special Officers Broderick and Hennessy for stealing grain from the freight cars of the Chicago and Alton Railroad, were to-day taken before 'Squire Bunyan, who held them for the grand jury in default of $100 bail each.

Officer Kilkeary to-day arrested Louis Belleville, a teamster in the employ of Mrs. Mackey, of St. Louis, who furnishes the horses and carts used by the Narrow Gauge Transfer Company, for cruelly beating his horses. Belleville was locked up and will be taken before a justice this afternoon.

Henry Hunter and James Larkins, two suspicious-looking characters, were arrested at two o'clock this morning by Officers Kane and Zimmerman, who found them prowling about the depot in East St. Louis. It is believed that they belong to a gang who have been committing petty depredations on the freight cars of the various railroads centering in East St. Louis. They were locked up in the station-house by Colaboose Keeper Wallace.

A petition to the State Board of Health drawn up by several of the most prominent citizens of East St. Louis, praying for the abatement of the nuisance caused by the River Rendering Co., is in circulation and has already received many signatures. The Rendering Company transport dead animals across the river from St. Louis to the vicinity of the Pittsburg Dyke and they are allowed to remain there for days, causing, as is recited in the petition, an insufferable and unbearable stench, which is detrimental to the health of the inhabitants of the city and very offensive to their nostrils.

A most interesting ceremony was performed last evening at the Fourth Ward House in East St. Louis, being the nuptials of the Hon. Spencer M. Kase, a prominent lawyer and politician of that city, and Mrs. Emma Jenks. The tying of the matrimonial knot, which was performed by the Rev. S. F. Holt of the Baptist church was witnessed by quite a large number of the groom's bretbren of the legal profession, and also several of the lady friends of the bride. At the conclusion of the ceremony, and after the happy couple had received the congratulations of their friends, they started on a brief wedding tour.

Scarritt's Furniture Store on Fire.

The wreck of the furniture store of the Scarritt Company, No. 613 North Fourth street, caught fire again about noon to-day. The building was thoroughly gutted last Monday night, and to-day there was little to burn. A flame, however, was noticed in the fourth floor and a still alarm brought engine No. 12 to the scene, and the debris around was completely drenched in order to extinguish any smouldering fire. There was no damage, of course, as the remnants of the last fire were worthless, and it is supposed the flame to-day was caused by the wind fanning a coal which had not been quenched at the big fire.

The Wheat Grades.

The interest in the controversy about the grades of wheat is growing warmer and the following petition was handed in this morning:

To the President of the Merchants' Exchange:

We, the undersigned, would respectfully request you to convene the Board of Directors of our Exchange on or before the 25th inst. with a view of getting an expression as to whether the question of lowering grades will require two-thirds of all votes cast or simply a majority to carry the question to a successful issue. We ask this because we learn that at a late meeting this question was discussed, and your honorable body decided to leave the question in abeyance till after the voting has taking place on the 30th inst. In asking for a vote on the question of lowering grades, we hold that we are not asking for a change of any rule, and therefore contend that only a majority vote is required.

The document is signed by a large number of those who favor the proposed change, and President Smith announces that he will call the regular meeting on or before the 25th inst.

New Buildings.

F. Stahl is building a $5,000 stable on Olive street, between Cardinal and Garrison avenues.

A store four stories high to cost $9,000 will be built soon by Jno. Lauderman, on the north side of Olive street, between Ninth and Tenth.

Joseph Weil is preparing to build a two-story brick dwelling on the southwest corner of Cardinal avenue and Pine street, which will cost about $12,000, and a stable to cost $1,500.

Court of Criminal Correction.

Catherine Hosey had an examination before Judge Cady to-day on a charge of grand larceny. She was held over in the sum of $800, and in default of bond was committed to jail. George Schumacher and Adam Siegerich were examined on the same charge. Siegerich was discharged and Schumacher's case taken under advisement until September 21. August Tschofen, arraigned for assault to kill, was discharged. A charge of grand larceny against Henry McElroy was continued generally.

Arrested On Warrants.

James Masseno was committed to the protection of the jailor to-day on an assault and battery warrant sworn out by Louis Weiss. Pete McCann was assigned to the care of the same gentleman on a similar charge preferred by Frank De Buel. Michael Colloney was arrested on a charge of stealing a coat from William Schroder. Charles Kraedler, accused of the theft of a gold watch and chain valued at $100 from Henry Betram was taken in charge by a deputy sheriff this morning.

"Nanie's" Baby.

About five weeks ago a young woman, known to the public as "Nanie," left a boy baby, ten months old, with Jane Davis, a colored woman, living in the rear of 210 South Tenth street. The colored woman was unable to care for it properly, and to-day turned it over to the police. The child was sent to St. Ann's Asylum.

Fatal Accident.

A carpenter named McDonald, while working on the building at Eighth and Gate streets this afternoon, fell through the joists of the structure, a distance of several feet, to the sidewalk. His spine was broken and he sustained internal injuries. As soon as possible the injured man was removed to his home.

FAILURE.

Long ago you said to me, "Sweet,
A glorious kingdom before you lies;"
You pointed it out to my willing feet,
You lighted the way with your loving eyes.

Many the triumphs the years have brought;
Keen the pleasures, but keener the pain.
I stand by your side in the realm of thought,
And I ask myself, Is it loss or gain?

You give to me generous meed of praise,
You give to me honor and trust, I know;
But you think with regret of my simple ways,
My fond unwisdom of long ago.

Though I speak with the wisdom of gods and men
(This is the bitter that spoils my sweet),
I know full well that never again
Can I stir your pulse by a single beat.

You are not to blame. There is naught to be said;
Ever by fate is our planning crossed.
I did the best that I could, love-led,
For the sake of winning what I have lost.

CARLOTTA PERRY.

BULLDOGS IN BATTLE.

A Brutal Fight Between New York and Philadelphia.

From the New York Sun, 14th.

For four months a dog fight has been the subject of argument in New York, Philadelphia, and, it is said, half the cities of the country. The dogs were at last let at each other, and one of the bloodiest brute contests that ever took place in this country occurred. Joe Bagley's white three-year-old bull, Tricksy, bred in Philadelphia from imported English parents, had been the hero of numerous fights, and at last a party of New York sports set out to get a dog that would kill him. They got Paddy, a yellow and white bull of spotless lineage, direct from England. He is two and a half years old. The bet was $500 a side, each dog to fall in the scales at twenty-eight pounds. Paddy, the New York dog, was trained down to twenty-seven pounds and a half, and Tricksy, the Philadelphia yellow and white, when he was put down, only a quarter of a pound more. Sports came from long distances to see the fight. The two or three hundred who were in the secret rolled out toward Ridgewood, L. I., yesterday morning in coaches. They were to meet at a rendezvous at 10 o'clock, but the secret was not well distributed, and some of the sports went astray. At last, however, about three o'clock, they all found their way to an old barn where a pit had been constructed twelve by eight feet in dimensions, and the siding was three feet high. Each man paid $5 admission fee.

Cockney Charlie, who was to handle New York's yellow champion, washed the Philadelphia dog to make sure there was no poison on him that might get into his own dog's mouth during the fight, and Joseph Bagley returned the delicate compliment by washing the New York dog. There was a large tub. Paddy was so savage that before he would let Bagley scrub him a handkerchief had to be put around his jaws and a muzzle on top of that. Tricksy submitted like a Quaker, with merely a knotted handkerchief to bind his jaws together. The dogs were washed with hot water, soft soap, and potash, and then rinsed with cold water and rubbed dry. Next the pit, where the washing occurred, was sponged dry, so that the dogs could get a good footing. No more water was spilled in it, but it did not long remain dry.

At 5 1-4 the referee, a Philadelphia sporting man, gave the word. "Get ready," he shouted. "Let 'em loose!" Each handler was holding his dog by the sides of his jaws. "Go on, Paddy!" "Go on, Tricksy?" came from the handlers' lips at the referee's word of command, and from that instant there was no cessation of the fight for two hours and twenty-five minutes.

The New York dog got Tricksy by the butt of one ear. Tricksy tried to gnaw at Paddy's chops, but he could not get a hold. Once or twice he scratched Paddy's paws, which the latter put in the way, but there was little left for him to do. At the end of five minutes Paddy threw him. The betting had started at $100 to $80 on Philadelphia. Paddy held him down ten minutes, and then tricksy broke the ear hold at fearful cost to his ear, and got upon his feet. Paddy grabbed him again, and again threw him. After twenty-five minutes the betting was changed, and was $25 to $10 on New York's English importation. The brutes fought all over the pit, and the floor was soon covered with blood. Paddy seemed to have it all his own way, but after the lapse of fifty-one minutes Philadelphia's hope threw him. This was a great feat, for Paddy had already broken the fore part of his upper jaw, and he could not close his mouth. Spectators said that the jaw was dislocated. The Philadelphians recovered their courage, and for a short time the betting was even. But Paddy again caught him and held him, and thereafter he had the best of it. He chewed Tricksy's breast until it was a mass of bloody flesh. He closed his left eye, chewed his cropped ears away and gnawed at his legs, but Tricksy took it all without complaining. Paddy was a very cunning dog. When Joe Bagley would encourage his pet Paddy would glance up at him in a way to make Bagley leap away. Bagley had been warned that if he didn't mind himself Paddy would bite him.

"He looked at him like a Christian," said a delighted New Yorker, as he saw Paddy glancing up under his bloody eyelids at the Philadelphia handler. Several times Paddy, blind with rage, bit his own foot and hung on to it, together with some part of Tricksy that he had seized at the same time.

Night came on, but kerosene lamps were produced to enable the men to watch the fight. There was no interruption to the chewing, struggling and twisting. The Philadelphians said that they had been obliged under the terms of the agreement to train Tricksy down too fine. They thought he ought not to have been trained down to less than thirty pounds.

At the end of two hours and twenty-five minutes the Philadelphia dog was laid out for dead by his opponents. Paddy studied him warily a moment, but at last appeared to conclude that there was no life in him. He then turned away toward his handler, Cockney Charlie. Charlie picked him up. He seemed to pick him up too quick, and the Philadelphians called on the referee. He astonished the New Yorkers by deciding plumply that Philadelphia had won, on the ground that Charlie had been too quick to pick up his dog. He said he had no right to pick Paddy up until the dog had come to him. He said Charlie had picked him up just after he had turned away from Tricksy. The New Yorkers insisted that even though the dog had been picked up too quick, it was a matter still within the discretion of the referee, who, they said, should have ordered the dogs to be let at each other again. The referee was game, but the New Yorkers were angry, and they were in a majority. He held to his decision. They got him in a corner of the barn, and the Philadelphians were afraid he would be killed. There was wild excitement. It seemed really likely at one time that the referee would be killed. In the midst of the riot big Uncle Jim jumped into the thick of the crowd, and, by his strength and counsels, contributed to calm the excitement. Nothing, however, would have saved the Philadelphia referee from at least a frightful beating had he not taken advantage of the diversion made by Uncle Jim, and shouted out that since there was a disposition on the part of some of the New York men to be reasonable, he was willing to declare the fight a draw, and all outside bets off. This decision ended the riot, but not the discussion. The New Yorkers came away disgusted at the end of their day's sport.

While the disturbance was going on around the pit Tricksy died, and his body was thrown out upon the grass. Paddy was badly hurt, but he will recover.

Dens of "The Drainers."

From the New York Herald.

Long known as "Drainers," but in the slang of the day favored with half a dozen pseudonyms, there exists in the city a class of beings who only in the police courts or station houses pop into occasional notice. They are the very dregs of poverty and trampdom—the creatures who roam about at night with buckets or tin pails, or even tomato cans, to catch the drippings of the exhausted beer kegs piled at saloon doors. Of course much of the fluid so gathered is used for private consumption, but in that section of the city where the squalid streets and alleys of the Italian quarter lie in a dingy maze within hearing of the bustle of two thoroughfares there are numbers of low groceries where stale beer is offered for sale. The patrons of such places are of the very lowest class. Most of them are Italians who toil upon the dirt heaps or ply the medicant's arts about town. At night when these swarthy, uncouth beings are at leisure the stale beer shopkeepers have a large clientele.

It is chiefly about the bend in Mulberry street and the corresponding curvature in Baxter that these drinking dens cluster, and hitherto the police have not cared to molest the dingy little holes, whose occupants neither know nor observe the excise ordinances. On Sunday last, however, official cognizance was taken of their existence, and under the direction of Officer Fisher, of the Fourteenth Precinct, the proprietors of most of them were called to account. All were foreigners—Italians, Sicilians and the like—and on their arraignment in the Tombs Police Court they presented an odd group of dark faces, with few prepossessing traits in them.

SOMEWHAT ROMANTIC.

A Handsome Missouri Girl Enlists in the Regular Army.

From the Sedalia Bazoo.

Last fall, while with a party of tourists taking in the sights of Wyoming and other Territories, Miss Nellie Burden, of Springfield, Mo., met with an incident that will in a few days result in her becoming a married lady and the wife of a dashing and gallant lieutenant in the service of Uncle Sam. In Wyoming the party stopped for a while at a fort where a number of soldiers were quartered in command of Lieutenant Newton. The commander was a pleasant, agreeable gentleman, brave and handsome, and Miss Burden being a highly educated, accomplished lady, pretty and a good singer, they naturally enjoyed each other's acquaintance and were frequently in company. An intimacy that soon ripened into love followed, and when the party of tourists left the fort they, in that peculiar manner known only to those who have loved, exchanged hearts.

Miss Burden returned to her elegant Missouri home in the Queen City of the Ozarks, and the brave Lieutenant was left at the lonely fort, far from civilization, to mourn the departure of his beautiful and accomplished visitor. A correspondence followed, and before the early spring flowers had faded they were betrothed and their separation became more unbearable. The officer tried to get leave of absence to come to Missouri and claim his bride, but, being in command, he was so situated that a leave of absence of but four days could be had. It was then arranged for her to meet him in Omaha, there get married and accompany him to the far-off fort. Like all true and noble women, she would undertake any hardship and undergo any inconvenience to prove herself true to the man she loved, and the proposition was accepted. Miss Burdon left her pleasant Springfield home, where all is prospering that wealth and kind parents can vouchafe, yesterday, and started on her long and tiresome journey. Tiresome? No, not to her. It is to her a pleasant one, for she goes to enjoy the companionship of one she loves best of all others on earth.

Prince Napoleon's Boot-Maker.

From the London Telegraph.

A diverting story, humorously illustrative of Prince Jerome Bonaparte's proverbial thriftiness, has recently gone the round of the Parisian newspapers. It appears that during the latter part of his cousin's reign the Prince became dissatisfied with his bootmaker, and formally withdrew his custom from that artist, who continued, nevertheless, to ornament the front of his shop with the attractive inscription, "Purveyor to his Imperial Highness, the Prince Napoleon." Noticing this delusive announcement one day, as he drove past the shop, Prince Jerome sent a member of his household to the boot-maker with positive orders that the inscription should be forthwith removed. As, however, he subsequently found that his commands had been disregarded, he took legal proceedings against the boot-maker for unlawful and mendacious advertisement of his (the Prince's) patronage. The defendant's counsel, in the course of his pleadings, endeavored in the following ingenious manner to show cause why his client should not be compelled to withdraw the offending inscription, arguing that such a decision on the part of the court would infallibly result in serious prejudice and loss to the boot-maker. "For," he observed, "hitherto passers-by whose attention was attracted by the announcement in question stopped, entered the shop and bought boots freely of my client. And why did they so? Because they had already said to themselves, 'Prince Napoleon's boot-maker! That must be a good workman, and an uncommonly cheap one into the bargain. We will give him a trial.' If you force him to remove his inscription, the perfidious public will certainly infer that he must have raised his prices, and will hurry past his shop with averted eyes." The boot-maker, it need scarcely be added, was cast, but one cannot help regretting that so humorous a plea should have been disallowed by a French tribunal.

The Ethics of Stage Names.

From the New York Herald.

Many men and many women feel an exhaustless curiosity in prying into the minutest details of the private life of dramatic or operatic favorites. The aforesaid favorites, being wiser in their generation than the children of light, have prudently been accustomed to circumvent the searchers after truth by the adoption of stage names which are all the more genuine for being of home manufacture. Along with the name there is usually associated a miniature biography of so plausible a character as to deceive the very elect. The avowed use of a stage name amounts to a distinct notification to the anxious inquirer that, for value received, a choice—Hobson's choice—is allowed between the acceptance of the authorized legend and blank agnosticism.

This practice has the sanction of time-honored custom, and it would be useless to protest against so harmless and reasonable a deceit. The line must, however, be drawn somewhere, and most people will agree that it may properly be drawn at the deliberate assertion that the stage pseudonym and romance constitute real biography. It was generally believed that the charming actress and beautiful woman known to both continents as Lilian Adelaide Neilson really bore that name in private life, but her premature death has rudely torn the veil. The English papers have lately disclosed that the story of her birth at Saragossa in 1850 is a myth, that her real name was Elizabeth Ann Brown, that she was born March 3, 1839, at St. Peter's Square, Leeds; that her mother, a Gypsy woman, is still living; and that her introduction to public notice was first as a bar-maid, and next as a ballet-dancer on the boards of a London theater. The world will not harshly condemn her for wishing to conceal her humble origin, but the incident points a valuable moral to other members of the profession—namely: to consult plausibility in their stage myths, so that they may not be too ruthlessly shattered by unforeseen contingencies.

A Brother's Terrible Assault.

From the Albany Journal.

Larry and Andrew Mable, brothers, living in Troy, quarreled while fishing in Snyder's Lake. Andrew drew a dirk knife and made a stab at his brother, who to escape jumped into the lake. He sank, and when he came to the surface of the water the vengeful brother attacked him again, driving the murderous weapon into Larry's back and arm several times. The wounded man got out of the reach of the knife, swam to the shore, and was cared for by people there. He was subsequently taken to Troy for treatment.

THESE reports are in unison with those appearing in every part of the country, and it is not to be wondered at that they should produce astonishment among the people, the press and the profession, and cause another "oil boom." The Terre Haute Saturday Evening Mail thus speaks of the St. Jacobs Oil excitement pervading the country.

BEER IN ENGLAND.

Drunkenness the Besetting Sin of English Workmen.

Richard Grant White in Atlantic Monthly.

The Englishman, and particularly the Englishman of the laboring class, is wedded to his beer. He feels that it is the great comfort, and one of the very few enjoyments, of his life. And not only is the chocolate room or any other like contrivance "slow," but there is about it an imputation that he is taken in hand and managed by his betters, like a child, which he not unnaturally resents. Rightly or wrongly, he feels more ashamed of being treated in this way than he does of being drunk once a week—once, however, being here a word of wide signification. For in these cases "the same drunk" often extends from Saturday night to Monday and not unfrequently into Tuesday. The result of this habit, which may almost be called a custom, is deplorable and socially injurious to a degree of which we in America have a very imperfect idea. The beer of England is not like the light German beer which has come so much into vogue here of late years under the name of "lager," and of which a man of any stability of brain and knee might drink enough to swim in without feeling any other effect than that of unpleasant distention; it is heady, strongly narcotic, and apparently not exhilarating, but depressing. Drunk in large quantities, after a short period of excitement it dulls the brain and fills the drinker's whole bulk with liquid stupefaction. He becomes not intoxicated, but besotted. Not only laboring men and men who ought to labor, but do not, give themselves up to this debasing habit of beer-drunkenness through two or three days of the week, but skilled artisans, men whose work is of a kind and of an excellence which is worthy of respect and admiration. I was more than once told of an artisan of this class, a man whose work was always in demand at the highest price, and who could with ease have kept himself and his family in perfect comfort and have laid up money, that he would not work for any man or at any price more than four days in the week. Blue Monday is a recognized "institution" in England; and, as I have intimated, the blueness of it extends not unfrequently into Tuesday, and this among the very best of the skilled artisans. One bookbinder told me that his two best men, "finishers" to whom he gave his finest work in perfect confidence that it would be done unexceptionably both in workmanship and in style, never made any "time," that is, never got really at work, before Wednesday. Like stories were told me of other equally accomplished gentlemen. This is not only ruinous to the men and to their families, but the aggregate industrial less to England must be very great. And this steady, besotted drunkenness seems to be at the bottom of most of the distress and most of the crime of England. A clergyman whose work lay much among the laboring classes told me that he felt utterly powerless before this vice, which was a constant quantity in the problem that he was called upon to solve. I know a lady who was a district visitor in a suburb of London, one of those ministering angels who in England, more, it seems to me, than in any other country in the world, give themselves up to the work of helping and bettering the most wretched and degraded of their kind, and who carry Christian love and purity and grace into dens of filth and sin and suffering which, if they did not see them, would be beyond their chaste imaginations; and I asked her one day if she met with any encouragement, and if she thought she had been able to do much real good. With a sad, sweet smile she answered, "Very little. The condition of these people seem hopeless; and they are hopeless. All that we can do is to help them from time to time: and we find them always where we left them, or if possible yet lower, more degraded, more wretched. And at the bottom of it all is drunkenness. The men are always more or less drunk, and the women are almost as bad. They earn a little money, and they get drunk. Husband and wife get drunk together; they quarrel; they fight; and the children grow up with this before them. They are never really quite sober unless they are starving or ill. What can be done for such people? How can they or their condition be made better?" The tears gushed from her eyes as she spoke. I knew that it was so. My own observation, very small and of little worth as compared with hers, had yet shown me this. And I was struck with horror at the besotted condition of so many of the women—women who were bearing children every year, and suckling them, and who seemed to me little better than foul human stills through which the accursed liquor with which they soaked filtered drop by drop into the little drunkards at their breasts. To these children drunkenness comes unconsciously, like their mother tongue. They cannot remember a time when it was new to them. They come out of the cloud-land of infancy with the impression that drunkenness is one of the normal conditions of man, like hunger or like sleep. Punishment for mere drunkenness, unaccompanied by violence, must seem strange to them, one of the exactments which separate them from the superior classes, from whom come to them, as from a sort of Providence, both good and evil.

An Eccentric Monarch.

From the London Truth.

The most eccentric European sovereign is King Ludwig II. of Bavaria. Last Wednesday he celebrated, or rather there were celebrated for him, his birthday and the seven hundredth anniversary of his dynasty, the Wittelsbachian. The King did not show himself in his capital on that occasion. He caused a letter to be written thanking the people for their congratulations and asking them not to go to any great expense on his account. When he was young he would dress in the general hunting costume of the country, appear among the dancers on the village green, make love to the village beauties and, after a day or two, disappear. He has several small chateaus among the mountains, from which such excursions were made. He was eager to join the Imperial Confederation, knowing that it would relieve him of most of his royal responsibility. Always a friend of artists and actors and actresses, he began very early in his reign to add to the galaxy of Munich beauties whose portraits adorn his palaces. No longer bored with military matters, the reception of embassadors and the signing of dispatches on foreign relations, he devoted himself entirely to art, and erected the "Winter Garden," which is the great mystery and wonder of Munich. His Opera-house is the most perfectly arranged in Germany, and when he visits it he visits it alone; none of the public are admitted. One day he ordered "King Lear" to be played. The acting pleased him and he bestowed numerous orders upon the actors, but the stage machinery, he said, was defective. There was thunder and lightning but no rain. He called the manager to the royal box and ordered that the water in the huge cistern on the roof should at the next representation of "Lear" be allowed to fall through a large sieve on to the stage. The next occasion was again private and strictly royal, and when it thundered and the lightning flashed the King shouted for the rain, and it was accordingly turned on.

Charlotte Corday's Dress.

From the London News.

Alcibiades is said to have cut off the tail of his dog in order to give the Athenians something to talk about and to divert their attention from serious topics. Happy the people whose minds can take occasional rest from serious subjects, like politics, in the discussion of trifles! At present the French press is engaged in a grave controversy about the quality and color of the dress which Charlotte Corday wore on the day when she assassinated Marat. Everybody knows that the great demagogue was in his bath at the moment when Mlle. De Corday called at his house, No. 21 Rue de l'Ecole de Medicine, and craved an audience through the medium of his old housekeeper. It is also known that she wore what is now called a mob-cap—an article of apparel which came back into fashion a few years ago in England, but which was in 1792 the ordinary head-gear of young ladies hailing from Normandy. Beyond the fact, however, that Charlotte Corday wore a mob-cap, historical searchers can not agree as to her attire. Some say that she presented herself at Marat's house in a dress of striped calico, dusty from travel; others affirm that on alighting in Paris from the Rouen coach she went into a hotel and tricked herself out in a dress of spotless white muslin, with a silk kerchief and mittens. This would have been the most natural course in the case of a young lady of cool mind; but the dispute about Charlotte Corday's dress turns precisely upon the point as to whether this girl was a heroine animated by an implacable spirit of vengeance in a patriotic cause, or a poor half-crazed damsel who came up to Paris to kill Marat simply because she feared for the life of her lover Barbaroux. So red Republicans who worship the memory of Marat maintain that she wore a rusty red-striped calico dress, whereas royalists and others who loathe the editor of L'Ami du Peuple protest that she went about her fell work robed in white like an angel.

The Coming Prima Donna.

From the New York Times.

It is not exactly true that Miss Gertrude M. Griswold, of this city, who took both first prizes at the Conservatoire, in Paris, a few weeks ago, is a niece of Bret Harte, as has been repeatedly stated in dispatches by cable. Miss Griswold is the only daughter of the late Charles E. Griswold, whose fortune was wrecked in the crisis of 1873. In 1873 Mr. Griswold went abroad with his family, and Miss Griswold, then fifteen years of age, was placed at school in Vevay, Switzerland. Here one of her schoolmates was the daughter of Mark Smith, the comedian, and the daughter of the millionaire became the fast friend and constant companion of the daughter of the actor, who had even then marked out the professional career upon which she has since entered. Young and enthusiastic, possessed of the musical and dramatic talent of her family, supplemented by a fine voice and great personal beauty, Miss Griswold became enamored of professional life, and announced her determination of study for the stage. But her father would not hear of such a thing, and when the panic that wrecked so many large fortunes supervened, he had already made arrangements to return to the United States. He returned to find the house of C. E. Griswold & Co. embarrassed beyond recovery. Even the $50,000 deposited as a marriage portion for his daughter had been drawn from the bank by his partner, clothed with a power of attorney, and the once magnate of society was nearly beggared. Two years later, dying of a broken heart, the father gave his consent that the daughter should study for the lyric stage: and, saving what they could from the wreck after all liabilities were paid, the mother and daughter sailed for Europe, where they have since resided. Influential friends and relatives in Paris smoothed the way for Miss Griswold to finish her musical studies. She is the niece of Mrs. Harte and the cousin of Miss Cora Withers, afterward the Countess Cora de Wilhorst, whose appearance at the Academy of Music in this city years ago was the society topic of the day. And thereby hangs a tale which is often recalled in society gossip, but may be left untold, since it involves the story of a personal encounter at Newport and of a duel that was never fought, owing to the absence of one of the parties.

Bernhardt's Promiscuous Family.

Lucy Hooper's Letter to Chicago Times.

Sarah, the triumphant, has been in the city within the last few days, resting after her Danish successes and preparing for her provincial tour. She has been permitted to use the still unopened Theatre des Varieties for her rehearsals and may be seen stepping out of a closed carriage before its door every day about 2 o'clock. She is also engaged in superintending the preparation of her costumes for her American tour. They are all to be made by Felix, on the Rue St. Honore, as, unlike the rest of her sex, the divine Sarah does not believe in Worth. She is also getting ready an extensive outfit for her idolized son, for Maurice is of course to accompany her to the United States, a piece of maternal devotion which can not but be considered unwise and in bad taste. But if there is one point on which that capricious woman of genius is a little more crazed than another, it is in her blind devotion to her boy. He is, I am told, the worst-spoilt lad of his inches in all the city of Paris, indulged and petted in every possible way, and already requiting his mother's passionate devotion with the proverbial ingratitude of a spoiled child. The little girls remain quietly in their convent, and nobody ever hears of them; but Maurice Bernhardt, though he is not yet sixteen years of age, is his mother's inseparable companion. He is said to bear a strong personal resemblance to her except in the matter of his hair, which is red. An American lady recently told me that she never so fully appreciated the fascination of Sarah Bernhardt's voice and manner, even in her most applauded hour upon the stage, as she did one day on the occasion of a chance meeting with that famous actress when boating at Enghien. The boat containing my friend and her party was nearly swamped by one in which Sarah Bernhardt was acting as steersman, while her son figured among the rowers. On seeing the peril of the other bark, Maurice called out, "Pray, mamma, pay attention to what you are about." "Mon fils, je revais" (son, I was dreaming), was her reply, delivered with such melody of tone and charm of utterance that the hearer declared herself perfectly enchanted by these few simple words and quite repaid for the risk she had run of a sudden cold bath by the upsetting of her boat.

An Unhappy Princess.

From London Truth.

Almost every week I notice foolish and servile assertions that Princess Louise is delighted with Canada and that anything to the contrary is a mischievous invention. That the Princess dislikes either the people or the country is false, but it is perfectly true that she very much dislikes her residence there; and it would be odd if she did not. An eminent Canadian said to me last week: "Of course she does, and everybody knows it and understands it; there is nothing to resent in the fact." The Princess is separated from her family, has none of her friends near her and is inevitably altogether out of the court "swim," which, to those who have been accustomed to a court, is an intolerable deprivation. As to the visit of Her Royal Highness to this country it was quite a sudden idea, and was resolved on after Prince Leopold's accident and Her Majesty's command for his immediate return. I hear the Queen has expressed her desire that the Princess should go back to Canada as soon after her return from Germany as may be convenient to her.

THE value of wives varies in different countries. In America they are often expensive companions, but in the higher regions of the river Amar, and on the Ussuri in Siberia, according to information furnished to the British Scietific Association by the Rev. Henry Lansdell, the price of a wife is eight or ten dogs, a sledge, or two cases of brandy. In another part of the world, according to evidence furnished to the same association by Wilfred Powell, in New Britain and the neighboring islands on the east coast of Guinea, the wives are the absolute property of their husbands, and are bought, sold and eaten by their better halves. There was one New Britain young woman who rebelled at her matrimonial relations, whereupon her husband said he could put her to better use, and straightway killed and ate her. Unfortunately, according to the same authority, the eating in New Britain is not confined to wives. The natives are fond of missionary meat, and think the English are unutterably stupid because they are unwilling to feast on such a delicacy as the human thigh, prepared with cocoanut milk and dressed with banana leaves. Mr. Powell does not advise women to emigrate to New Britain.

THE FOLLY OF FOLLIES.—Many persons are accustomed to disregard all slight symptoms of disease, saying, "Let it go as it came." But when one feels the symptoms of Kidney Disease, such as pain in the back and loins, palpitation, urinary derangement, etc., to neglect them is the folly of follies. Kidney, Bladder, Liver and Urinary Complaints are always liable to end fatally if neglected. The true cure for them is HUNT'S REMEDY, the Great Kidney and Liver Medicine. There is no symptom or form of Kidney Disease that HUNT'S REMEDY is not master of.

GLOAMING.

Twilight downward softly floateth;
All, once near, seems dim and far;
High aloft now faintly gleameth,
Pale and clear, the evening star.

All in doubtful shadow quavers;
Up and up the slow mists creep;
Down the lake, 'mid deepest darkness,
Mirroring darkness, lies asleep.

On the eastern sky appearing,
Lo! the moon, bright, pure, and clear;
Slender willows' waving branches
Sport upon the waters near.

Through the playful, flitting shadows,
Quivers Luna's magic shine;
Through the eye thus freshness stealing,
Steals into this heart of mine.

A MYSTERIOUS SKELETON.

The Reigning Sensation in a Long Island Village.

From the New York Times.

Coroner Davron, of Long Island City, is engaged in the investigation of a case which appears to be a real mystery, and is likely to remain so until possibly some death-bed disclosure divulges its secret. In the laboratory of Dr. Dennler, the Coroner's medical assistant, on Jackson avenue, lie the skull, thighbone, and most of what was once—not more than two years ago—a magnificent specimen of physical manhood. When discovered at a lonely point on the Long Island shore, near Astoria, the brain was still partly intact in the cranial cavity, but in other respects the skeleton was completely denuded. A jet of water fell upon them with a drip as dismal as it was constant, slowly dissolving away the green slime and ooze with which the sea had coated the relics. The skull is that of an Anglo-Saxon head of the finest and most cultivated type. "There," said Dr. Dennler, "is the cranium of a man of brains, energy and culture." The angle of the jaw indicated that the man was from forty to forty-five years of age when, without clothing or shroud, he was inclosed in an oblong box of rough boards and buried at low tide off Woolsey's Point. He must have been about six feet in stature, broad-shouldered, strong-limbed and of powerful muscular development, but the sea and the fishes have not left even a tuft of hair upon the cranium to tell what complexion he was or to furnish a clue to his identity. The teeth were all in the soundest possible condition, but two of the front ones in the lower jaw were gone when the skeleton was placed in the Coroner's hands. They were evidently present when the body was buried, however, for their sockets are not shrunken in the least, as they would necessarily be if the two teeth had been extracted some time before death. Other teeth have fallen out since the skeleton was exhumed, and it is presumable that the two missing ones, with the remaining small bones, will be discovered by a thorough examination of the mud in the rude box in which the man was buried.

The remains were discovered by two fishermen—Thomas and James Cody, of Astoria—on Thursday, as they were cruising along the shore for the driftwood and flotsam that every storm washes upon the low-lying banks of Long Island. It was low tide, and one end of the box projected slightly from the sand. The bank at Woolsey's Point, a tongue of meadow land forming one of the confines of Bowery Bay, is about six feet high, and very difficult of access from the land, owing to a dense growth of underbrush. One of the men thrust an oar into the exposed end, which yielded readily to the blow; and its withdrawal brought forth the thigh bone of a human skeleton. Calling to their assistance a neighboring fisherman they investigated the contents of the box sufficiently to infer that it contained the remains of a human being. They then reported the case to Officer Keegan, of the Long Island City police, who suggested that the Coroner was the proper officer to take cognizance of the affair. The suggestion was acted upon, and Friday the Coroner accompanied the two fishermen to the spot. But the rising tide interfered with the work, and it was not until Saturday morning that Coroner Davron finally transferred the skeleton to his office. The box had been buried about six feet beneath the bank, and covered with heavy stones before filling the excavation with earth. Month by month the sea gnaws away a little of Woolsey's Point, and by this process the end of the coffin was exposed to view.

The Coroner's jury viewed the remains and were then dismissed until Monday evening next, when the Coroner hopes to have some evidence bearing upon the case. Dr. Dennler has examined the remains cursorily, but not with sufficient care to pronounce an opinion. The suspicion is strong that a murder was committed, possibly on board some ship in the harbor, possibly in New York City, and the body hidden in this lonely spot. The coffin was evidently not the work of an undertaker. It was put together with common nails, and the fact that they were not badly rusted furnishes one of the clues that indicate that the burial took place not more than eighteen months ago. The bones are also in an excellent state of preservation, but so far as examined present no evidence that the man came to his death by violence. There is neither fracture nor perforation of the cranium at any point. It is indisputable, however, that the body was placed in the coffin perfectly naked, and was thus buried, which is scarcely consistent with the theory that the man died a natural death on board some vessel and was thus interred to save trouble.

Maj. Andre's Portrait.

From the New York Tribune.

As the day for the centennial celebration of the capture of Maj. Andre at Tarrytown, September 23, is approaching, it may not be an uninteresting fact that a portrait of Andre, painted by himself by the aid of a looking-glass during his brief imprisonment, may be found in Westchester county. It is in possession of Clark Davis, a farmer and undertaker, of Upper New Rochelle. As far back as can be traced at present it came into the possession of a Mr. Ball, then living at Bethany, New Haven county, Conn., whose father was a native of New England. Young Mr. Ball is said to have obtained the picture in one of the Southern States and carried it to England, with what object it is not definitely known, but it is supposed for the purpose of finding the relatives of Andre and presenting or selling the picture to them. How far he was successful in the object of his mission to England can only be surmised by the fact that he brought the picture back, and finally presented it to his father at his home in Bethany. Mr. Ball, Sr., prized it highly. Shortly before his death he gave the portrait to his daughter Statira, who became the wife of Truman Davis, of Naugatuck, Conn. Mr. Davis was a Welshman, and shared his wife's interest in the picture. He gave it a conspicuous place in one of the rooms of his dwelling.

Some time subsequently, after the death of Mrs. Davis, Mr. Davis married a widow, Mrs. Sophia Mallory, who objected to the painting, and had it put away in the garret. Clark Davis, on visiting his father on one occasion, missing the picture from the place which it had long occupied, inquired what had become of it, and when informed that it had been stowed away in the attic, asked for it, and obtained permission to take it away. He did so, and he has since been its possessor. In the picture, which is mounted in the original frame, Major Andre is represented as attired in the uniform of his rank, with a red coat with light green facings, ornamented with large gilt epaulets, buttons and embroidery, and with cambric ruffles around the wrists. His waistcoat and trowsers are of white material, and his shirt front is ornamented with old-fashioned projecting ruffles. He sits in an easy chair, with his legs crossed, his left elbow resting on the back of the chair, and his right hand stretched on the top of a round table by his side, on which rests an inkstand with a pen in it. From the window of his room, and in full view, may be seen a number of tents, and a large body of American troops, apparently being drilled by the officers, while the stars and stripes are floating in the breeze. Just beyond the encampment of the American army flows the Hudson, and the background of the picture consists of the range of hills extending northerly from the upper end of the Palisades. Andre, according to the portrait, had very dark brown hair, with small whiskers and fair complexion, and blue eyes. He had no beard or moustache.

NAPOLEON'S COOKS.

How the Great Exiled Emperor Lived at St. Helena.

From the New York World.

One of the most curious works written about the captivity of Napoleon is Careme's "Historical and Culinary Notes on the Manner in which Napoleon Lived at St. Helena, the Products of that Island and the Provisions which the Governor Furnished to Feed the Great Man." The Emperor on leaving France took due precautions as to his diet. He had a gastronomic staff of four artists, M. Cyprien, maitre d'hotel; M. Pieron, chef d'office; M. Lepage, cuisinier, and M. Lafosse, patissier. On their arrival at St. Helena they were furnished with four assistants—four Chinese! "M. Lepage," says Careme, sadly, "was probably the first French cook who ever found himself in such an embarrassing situation. To aid him in his labors, four—Chinese! I repeat it, this experience was the worst which any officer of the mouth could ever undergo. But the French cook has made the circuit of the globe and his culinary genius should surmount every obstacle." Fortunately Napoleon was not particularly exacting in the matter of food. He was very fond of blood puddings, of poulet a la Marengo, of all fried entrees, of vol-au-vents and, as became an Italian, of macaroni in every form. He was also passionately addicted to pastry and sweet entremets. His ordinary breakfast was composed of a potage—his favorite soup being a potage a l'oseille lie—of a small chicken roasted or a couple of cutlets and vegetables. The vegetables of the island "were worthless." His dinner bill of fare included soup, a remove, two entrees, a roast, pastry and sweets. Mme. de Remusat, by the way, has given a very full description of the Emperor at table in the interesting eighteenth chapter of her somewhat imaginative "Memoirs," and tells how he bolted a breakfast of two or three dishes, washed down with a huge cup of strong coffee, and how he was served at dinner with all the courses at once, eating whatever came to his hands and not unfrequently preluding the entrees with a dish of ice-cream or preserves. Quidnuncs have for fifty years delighted to trace the Emperor's downfall to the famous shoulder of mutton stuffed with onions which gave him an indigestion on the eve of the battle of Leipsic. It was the duty of Sir Hudson Lowe to supply the Emperor's table, and Careme declares that the provisions furnished were detestable. "Often the Emperor's poor cook had the sorrow of receiving a meagre forequarter of beef, while the Governor kept the hindquarter for himself. There was no game in the island. Twice or thrice each year arrived a few pheasants and red partridges from England, but the Governor reserved them for his own eating and sent the Emperor very few. Base and cowardly gastronomer!" cries Careme, in a passionate apostrophe, "what a crowning shame for thy history!" Until this, as M. Charles Monselet feelingly remarks, Sir Hudson has escaped the brand of infamy, from a gastronomic point of view, and unfriendly critics have contented themselves with calling him a jailer and a butcher. "Lache gastronome," however, "is good." Napoleon was fanciful in his tastes. One day he ordered a dinner in Chinese style, and when it was served could not bring himself to taste a single dish. Again, he ordered a camp soup for breakfast, and when the astonished cook served him up a light bread soup with a few beans, insisted on having the genuine article till he got a course soup so thick with beans and biscuit that the spoons stood upright in it. He was satisfied with the second dish, but ate of it very sparingly and never ordered it again. "What," asks Careme, philosophically—"what can have been the idea of the great captain in calling for a plain soldier's soup?" and giving his imagination the reins, he sees in fancy the Emperor fighting over again his first battles or wandering from bivouac to bivouac on the eve of an engagement. A great theme worthy of an even greater writer.

Cultivating Infectious Diseases in Children.

From the London Lancet.

At a recent meeting of the Orrell Local Board, near Wigan, in Lancashire, the clerk, in illustration of the difficulties which beset the control of infection, mentioned a practice which exists in that district of mothers deliberately exposing their young children to the infection of scarlet fever and whooping cough, under the belief that it was better that the children should have the disease while young. He designated the belief as a "superstition." We would rather term it a tradition, arising from the imperfectly understood results of experience.

The practice described is by no means confined to the part of Lancashire under consideration. Our own knowledge of it is somewhat extensive, but the exposure, so far as we have met with it, has been invariably limited to the obviously mild cases of infectious disease, and two elements entered into the practice. First, there was the practically universal belief that the infectious diseases of children had to be undergone by every child, and the sooner they were got over the better for the child, both as to its chance of recovery and its subsequent welfare; and, next, there was the belief that if a child contracted the disease from a mild case it would have a mild attack, hence mild cases were selected to catch the disease from.

In both these elements there was a substratum of truth, which long experience and common observation had shown, and which was unchecked by the more precise observation of the medical man.

RIVER NEWS.

It is a tow of ice the Polar Star has taken to Helena, Ark.

The J. W. Garrett will take a tow of barges to New Orleans.

The Memphis Avalanche says the price of the Key West is $8,000.

The War Eagle, Capt. Thompson, leaves at 4 p. m. for Keokuk and St. Paul.

The reliable packet Gen. Rucker, Captain Bunting, goes down the river to-day.

The famous passenger steamer Mary Morton leaves for St. Paul to-morrow evening.

The Halliday, for New Orleans, and Fannie Tatum, for Paducah, will leave on Saturday.

The fine and reliable packet Dora will leave this afternoon for Clarksville and all way landings.

The lighthouse steamer Joseph Henry left yesterday to set things to rights along the river to St. Paul.

The Chas. P. Choteau, Capt. Thorwegan, George Miltenberger clerk, will leave for New Orleans this evening.

Mullen & Hoppius are painting the J. W. Garrett and James Howard, and finished the Gold Dust last night.

Remember that the Diamond Jo and the K. N. Line of packets carry passengers during Fair week at reduced rates.

The Oakland is due here in a few days from New Orleans with 2,300 tons of cargo. The E. M. Norton is coming with 1,000 tons.

Cincinnati Gazette: The friends of Capt. Jas. D. Parker will mourn because he was not elected president of the Chamber of Commerce yesterday.

The Western Rivers Improvement Society is the name of an organization that is yet in embryo, and it is also in the opinion of many an impossible sort of a scheme.—[Cin. Times. We do not believe this scheme ever had any foundation, and it is about time the newspapers were dropping it.—[Com'l Gazette.

The first car load of grain, all-rail, from Texas arrived to-day, being a car load of oats consigned to Messrs. Schwabacher & Hirsch. This opens the all-rail grain business with Texas, and if anything like a vigorous effort is made all the surplus grain crops of that State will be drawn to this market.—[N. O. Times.

Pittsburg, 14: Arrived: Joseph Walton, Emma Graham and C. W. Batchelor. Departed: W. N. Chancellor, with all the freight she wanted. The steemboatmen's Association was presented this afternoon with a splendid flag by the ladies. Kentucky is the name of Captain Grammer's new packet. The Cumberland Transportation Company are building two model barges 225 feet long, 36 foot beam, 9 foot hold.

New Orleans Democrat, 14: The E. C. Carroll, Jr., leaving here last Wednesday, kept up with the Wm. Fagan until she got to Baton Rouge. There she stopped to coal, and the Fagan went on ahead. The coal she took there put her in good trim, and she caught up with the Fagan just above Bayou Sara, passed her under way and went on ahead herself for a change. The E. M. Norton, with four barges, arrived Sunday night, and was to have returned last night with four barges, 1,000 tons freight. The John Means arrived yesterday morning with six barges, Nos. 21, 22, 24, 26, 28 and the Wm. Gordon, and will return to-morrow.

N. O. Times: The question of ocean tonnage need not give any concern. As required, it will be provided. The high seas are full of ships, and there are many idle bottoms in many ports. Let it once be understood that there is freight in abundance at New Orleans and the ships to take it will soon fill our harbor. What is most wanted, after river tonnage and terminal facilities here, is a market such as exists at New York. The grain trade of the river can never assume very large proportions, or be managed smoothly and satisfactorily, as long as it has to be done as now, on a St. Louis basis, with transactions restricted to such as can be provided with predetermined arrangements from St. Louis to foreign ports. In a word New Orleans must do this business. Here is the exit. Here is where ships will come for cargoes, and here ship masters must understand they can safely come and have their vessels loaded without unreasonable delay. This will never be the case until grain is bought and sold here the same as in New York. We want stocks, not in transit, but in store, and that we cannot have until grain men operate on a New Orleans basis. Grain must be sold here on the spot. We earnestly commend this subject to the consideration of Messrs. Eugster, Schreiber, Gomilla, Martin, Forstall, Heliman, Seligman and others.

HANCOCK, the Superb, has congratulated Plaisted, the Pugnacious.

IT seems that we are to be treated to another dose of the Returning Board business in Maine.

THE Republicans of the First District this morning placed ex-Governor Thomas C. Fletcher in nomination for Congress in opposition to Mr. Clardy.

BY the closest kind of figuring the Republicans in Maine are able to elect their candidate for Governor by the appalling majority of 166. Still the returns are not all in.

NO matter what the final count may be in Maine, Mr. James G. Blaine is as effectually flattened out as though a car of Juggernaut had passed over him on a Belgian block pavement.

IN the nursery poem of blessed memory there is a beautiful reference to the little lambs that nip clover in the spring. The St. Louis Republicans, it seems, nip their Clover in the fall.

IT is given out that Mr. Conkling will deliver four great speeches in Indiana on the eve of the October election. They should be marked C. O. D., for the party won't to be able to reward him out of the profits of the election.

CHIEF LETHORADI has sustained a severe defeat in Basutoland. When the American can find out where Basutoland is, he may pause to weep over this sad affair. At present nobody but professional Africans are really enjoying this variety of news.

UNCLE DICK THOMPSON is at pains to create the impression that the Republican defeat in Maine amounts to little or nothing. True, but we have arrived at a correct estimate of the value of a Maine Republican's vote. According to Mr. Blaine, it is a fraction over $33.

THERE were two constitutional amendments voted on in Maine, one providing for biennial sessions of the Legislature, the other requiring that the Governor shall be elected by a plurality vote instead of a majority. Both amendments seem to have been adopted.

WE do not see at first glance precisely what the galvanized American citizens who cluster about the Republican office expect to gain by exciting prejudice against people of foreign birth, but it would seem that if there is anything profitable in the policy it should have the prominent indorsement of editorial type.

GEN. LONGSTREET has received his final instructions and has made preparations to start on his mission to the Sublime Porte. When the unrelenting Padisha takes by the hand the great rebel whose military prowess came very near depriving the Democrats of a great Union General candidate for President, he will doubtless appreciate the magnanimity and forgiving spirit of our noble Republic. The lesson will probably not be lost on the dilapidated rascal.

THERE never was such an array of Colonels seen in civil convocation on the face of the earth as that which aroused the echoes of Mercantile Library Hall yesterday. It was not until late in the evening that a depressed, insignificant person arose to the surface with the title of Major hanging to him. It is no wonder that Mr. Tyrell, throwing his eagle eye over the war-like assemblage, fell into the blunder of supposing that it was the Republican party that fought the battle of Bull Run.

REV. MR. MERINO has been elected and inaugurated President of Santo Domingo and the first act of his official career is to establish diplomatic relations with the outside world. He assures the Vatican of his complete accord and the Spanish American Republics are likewise, no doubt, eased in their minds to learn his friendly and benificent intentions. Santo Domingo will never be a very big country, but it certainly has a right to as much Diplomacy and Foreign Relations as it is willing to pay for, and if it amuses the Domingans why should anybody object?

THERE was a great and momentous Republican State Convention in St. Louis yesterday. The Honorable David Patterson Dyer was nominated for Governor, a negro restaurant-keeper was nominated for Railroad Commissioner and much other business of importance to the party was transacted. We find the proceedings of the convention very faithfully reproduced in the news columns of our unsociable contemporary, the Globe-Democrat, but for the life of us we cannot find a word of editorial endorsement or encouragement. We infer that the ticket does not meet the approval of the organ, though it is possible that time is required to formulate a fitting response to the work of the great party leaders, and that to-morrow will bring forth a regular drum and trumpet appeal. It would be too bad to have the Westliche Post supporting only one-half the Republican ticket and the Globe-Democrat actually ignoring the State canvass.

AN ANIMADVERSION.

We are perfectly willing that a newspaper established in this city in 1808 shall have all the credit that attaches to preemption and priority, but when the Republican undertakes to set up as the only friend that St. Louis has or ever had, we are disposed to revolt. Speaking of the census outrage this morning, the debonnaire Emperor of feeble-minded newspaper readers and truncheon-flourisher among saloon pigmies says:

> The Globe-Democrat and POST-DISPATCH, not content with encouraging tame submission, made the disappointing showing the text for fine homilies about the lack of progress and enterprise of St. Louis people. They were made to see in time, however, that the people they were maligning were not in any temper for their sneers and sarcasms, and it is a significant fact that the whole press of the city is to-day ranged on the Republican's original platform, unless, indeed, the Westliche Post continues to defend the accuracy of Mr. Salomon's enumeration of our population.

So far as the POST-DISPATCH is concerned, we wish to remark that the Republican, with its usual meanness when speaking of its successful contemporaries, lies most villainously. The files of the POST-DISPATCH may be drawn on to convict us of treason to the city of St. Louis if they contain a line not intended to excite popular indignation against the infamously false census of Salomon & Co. We may have relieved the tedium of life by occasionally copying a flippant paragraph from a Chicago journal inent our census, but no paper in this city has denounced that glaring fraud more persistently or constantly, and no paper has done more to stir the people up to action. Everybody knows this, and it is amazing that the Republican, with all its stupidity and malignancy, should lay itself open so needlessly to the forty-thousandth conviction on the charge of common lying. All public enterprises receive the hearty endorsement of the POST-DISPATCH. We do not favor a prompt rectification of the census because we have mortgaged property to be improved and we do not insist on payment in stock scrip when our editorial columns are opened to the promoters of enterprises designed to help the general public. We have as much interest in the prosperity of St. Louis as any citizen or collection of citizens within its walls and, whether rebelling against an unjust census or helping to rid the business public of the journalistic nightmare at the corner of Third and Chestnut, it will be found that we are at all times actuated by a spirit of justice and a sentiment of loyalty.

A MEXICAN ANNIVERSARY.

To-day is the seventieth anniversary of Mexican Independence. Or at least on this date seventy years ago the rebellion against Spain began at Parral in Chihuahua. The first fight was not made against Spain but against the families of pure Castilian blood, the Gachupines, who held all the offices and most of the property in the State. It was a rebellion against a home aristocracy and not against a foreign crown, a fact best proven by the circumstance that, after the war was over, the Mexicans asked for a Spanish prince to come and rule over them—a request which was refused. It was only then that Iturbide assumed imperial state. Really, Mexico was not free until the plan of Ayutla was victorious, in 1855. Since then there has been a measure of half-way self-government which might be called independence, and which, with occasional interregnums and revolutions, empires and dictatorships, has lasted down to this year of grace 1880. Looking at Mexico in the light of history, there seems to be but little reason why the anniversary of the first raising of the revolutionary standard should be celebrated. The quasi-independence from which the country has suffered has been anything but a blessing. An absolute monarchy, a despotism even, would have made a better government than the unbridled anarchy of too much freedom. Nothing is so petty as race strictures, but the Spanish-Americans have proven themselves the Turks of America. They have squatted on the fairest portion of the continent and they are deteriorating at their leisure. Within the last few years the condition of the Republic has improved, but it will take decades of steady good behavior to remove from the American mind the bad impression of its precedent anarchy. There is no one who does not wish Mexico well. The sister Republic ought to go hand in hand with us in the march of improvement, but while the twenty-seven States are nothing but twenty-seven Donnybrook fairs on a large scale there can be little real sympathy between the two countries.

FOR the last fifteen or twenty years not a week has passed that confidence games have not been played upon unsophisticated countrymen by St. Louis "crooks." There are two or three varieties of the swindle, all of them simple and all of them tame, and yet the rural gentleman drops into the traps as easily as though he and they were made for each other. It seems that age cannot wither nor custom stale the infinite flatness of the confidence game. Probably the rogues have played it so often that their perfection in the role is the reason of their continued success. After all the space which the papers throughout the country have devoted to sharper's tricks, it is disheartening that no good has come of it. There is no use in continual warnings when the victim wraps himself up in his knowledge of the world and depends on his own sagacity to get him safely back to Sleepy Hollow. The warnings "Lend no money to strangers" and "Beware of pickpockets" staring him in the face he resents as affronts to his understanding, and he is fleeced as thoroughly as Moses at the fair. Country knowingness is a singular commodity. You couldn't induce one of these gentlemen to eat a piece of mince pie in the best restaurant in St. Louis. You can't fool him and nobody is going to feed him on cat's meat, but his pocket-book is as open as his conscience for him who runs to help himself. The police can do little or nothing to defend so utterly helpless a class. If a man insists on being robbed it is his right, and hence until there is a radical change in the constitutional privilege of making an ass of oneself the confidence game in all its beautiful simplicity will thrive and prosper.

SINCE his Satanic Majesty offered to give away the entire world in fee simple, when he didn't own a foot of real estate on the surface of the planet, there has been no such display of liberality as that manifested by the Republicans of Missouri in nominating a negro yesterday for the office of Railroad Commissioner. The supposition is that Howard Barnes was nominated in order to appease the colored voters, who are clamoring for recognition. The compliment is a neat one, for up to this time no man of color has ever had a place on a Republican State ticket in Missouri, though the vote of the race has been solidly cast for the party. But what the colored man wants is something that he can tie to. A nomination on a State ticket, with a prospect of being buried beneath an adverse majority of 75,000, may be something of an honor, but it lacks tangibility. The appointment of a half-dozen colored men to small positions in the St. Louis Collector's office, with full pay and emoluments, would have given fully as much satisfaction, especially since it is charged that not more than one-third of the delegates in the convention yesterday knew that they were voting for a colored man when they voted for Barnes.

MR. SAMUEL ROMEO REED, editor of the Cincinnati Gazette, has reached his twenty-fifth essay on the campaigns of Gen. McClellan. We have not followed Mr. Reed closely, owing to the exacting nature of our duties, but we believe he has shown conclusively that McClellan was a traitor, an imbecile, a malingerer, a horse thief, an imposter and an inverted isoceles triangle. Mr. Reed acquired his knowledge of war from Napoleon's history of Julius Cæsar and the great Jomini. Some people will wonder why it was that such a military genius did not materialize during the war. A man capable of following up and criticising the movements of a great General fifteen years after the close of a war ought to be able to do remarkable things in time of actual conflict, but it not infrequently happens that men of giant intellect capable of the most warlike performances on paper would be thrown into convulsions by the crack of a teamster's whip in actual war. To this class belongs Mr. Reed. One might as well imagine the timid Gibbon, the matchless historian of Rome, riding beside Cæsar at Pharsalia as to imagine the shrinking Mr. Reed mingling in scenes of turmoil and lending his critical genius to warriors amid the whistle of hostile balls.

THE census committee of thirty, which meets this afternoon, has a very grave responsibility resting upon it, but the men who compose it are citizens of high standing, and they are no doubt competent to discharge the duties before them. This fact should be at once accepted by them—that St. Louis must have a new census. Not only reputation is at stake, but the actual value of real estate and the prosperity of the city. No one can estimate the damage caused by the miserable enumeration the Government has given and it is enough to excite the profoundest indignation when it is considered what a troupe of nincompoops were entrusted with this important work. The point for the committee to determine is how the new census shall be taken. This is a matter to be most carefully considered. We have no doubt the plan finally determined on will be heartily approved by the people, and if there is any money needed to carry it out it will be forthcoming.

COL. PAT. DYER, the Republican nominee for Governor, is one of the cleverest and most genial gentlemen in Missouri. He is a man of marked talents. In truth, he comes so near being a Democrat that it is hardly fair to call him a Republican, and his popularity—for he is popular—is chiefly due to this fact. If Grant had been nominated at Chicago, it is quite likely that Col. Dyer would have voted this fall for Hancock. That he should have been chosen as the honored standard-bearer of the Stalwart Party by a Stalwart convention which slaughtered Hitchcock on account of his anti third term record strikes us as a first-class piece of humor. The Republican party of Missouri, as in all Southern States, is radical, extreme and stalwart as to the backbone. The Globe-Democrat undoubtedly reflects the sentiment of the party when it demands the most radical men and measures. To place such a deliciously conservative gentleman as Col. Dyer at the head of the Republican organization in Missouri at such a time as this, when it is known that he has no more sympathy with its aims and tendencies than he has for Mohammedanism, is a joke of the most colossal character. Of course it means the utter demoralization of the party, and Col. Dyer, who is really too clever to be wasted in this way, will assuredly be shoved out of sight under an excess of about 100,000 Democratic ballots.

IT is gratifying to know that the barbarous code duello has received a black eye in South Carolina—the very hot-bed of pistols and coffee. The Hon. Junius H. Evans, while attending a Democratic convention in Marion county the other day, had his "honah" abraded by Mr. Gilchrist, the Sergeant-at-Arms, who hustled him in an undignified and chivalric way. He immediately challenged Mr. G. and Mr. G. promptly declined to step out and be killed according to established custom. The Hon. Mr. Evans began the usual procedure in such cases—posting the offending Sergeant-at-Arms as a poltroon and a coward—but the citizens of Columbia called a public meeting and denounced dueling as "the waning relic of a barbarous mode of settling differences between man and man;" indorsed the high moral, Christian courage of Mr. Gilchrist, and called upon the Governor of the State to remove Mr. Evans from the office of Trial Justice now held by and disgraced by him. This is real progress.

LATE dispatches from Maine make it extremely doubtful whether the Fusionists have elected their candidate for Governor. Mr. Barnum telegraphs that the Republican managers, having rallied from their first surprise, have taken possession of the telegraph wires and have gone to work to doctor the returns from the remote districts. It is observed that the back plantations do not show the ratio of Republican loss that the districts accessible by telegraph revealed on the morning of the election. In other words, there is an organized attempt to "count out" the Fusionists. It remains to be seen how the scheme will work. The tactics of the late Zachariah Chandler may be made to accomplish small results in this instance and the party which stole the Presidency in 1876 may squeeze in its candidate for Governor by a paltry majority, but the moral effect of the late election in Maine will rest with the followers of Hancock.

GEN. FRANZ SIGEL is making himself disagreeable on the Democratic stump in Indiana, and a miserable, broken-down Bohemian named J. Q. Thompson has been induced to sue him for $20,000, money said to be due him from the General for services rendered some years ago in writing him up in the newspapers in connection with the Berlin Mission. The fact that Thompson, though connected with the press of the country in a guerrilla way for twenty years, has never written over a hundred dollars' worth of matter, will probably induce the courts to razee his bill considerably. If Sigel is driven out of Indiana by this suit it will be in order for the Republican managers to employ Thompson to cause the arrest of every Democratic orator in the State upon such trifling charges as barratry, bastardy, burglary, etc.

THE Cincinnati Commercial remarks: "We wish the Democracy would introduce a few more Southern orators to speak in Ohio and Indiana." This means that there is a lack of bloody shirt over there. The presumption is that the Republican managers would be able to excite more prejudice against the South if they had a prominent specimen of the magnanimity of the Government, like Judge Key or Mosby, to dangle before the timid voters of the State. Four years ago, General Kilpatrick declared that "plenty of money and a bloody-shirt campaign" was all that was necessary to carry the State for Hayes. There has been no change of tactics, it seems.

LITTLE BILL CHANDLER, in his recent marvelous peep into the future, says:

> If we elect Garfield the sectional conflict will be over; the solid South will cease trying to divide the North and to destroy the results of the war; the old Rebel Democratic party will break in pieces; and hereafter the issues of politics will not be so vital as to involve both human liberty and national existence, but safety and internal peace for the American republic will be secure for at least a century.

The beauty about this chunk of wisdom is that by substituting the name of Hancock for that of Garfield and inserting the words "corrupt Republican party" where the phrase "old Rebel Democracy" occurs it can be made to do as effective duty on one side as on the other.

PERSONAL.

—Alfonzo turned his face to the wall and wept because it was a girl.

—Courtney is going to give up rowing. His oar doesn't assay ten cents to the ton.

—Gen. Hancock doesn't wear corsets. It's an infamous lie. He can't find any big enough.

—Julia Ward Howe is at Saratoga. Julia is the giddy girl who said the press could be bought.

—Thomas Nast is worth $200,000, and it has been estimated that Secretary Schurz's legs are responsible for about $1,000 of the amount.

—The new Vermont Senate will have only one Democrat. He will go into caucus occasionally, pull his own hair, just to keep up party traditions.

—The late advices from London are to the effect that Mr. E. A. Sothern has materially improved in health since the painful surgical operation recently performed on him.

—Mr. Epes Sargent is in ill health, owing to bronchial troubles, and is living in retirement in Boston. His new work, "The Scientific Basis of Spiritualism," is now ready for the press.

—A sister of Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt, Miss Smith, is to be married on the 22d inst., to Mr. Yznaga, brother of Lady Mandeville, the future Duchess of Manchester. The wedding will take place at Mr. Vanderbilt's country seat on Long Island. 222

—Speaking of Mr. Gladstone's flying visit to Dublin, the Freeman's Journal says: "The sight of his pale face—paler than when we last saw it in our streets—the flash of his bright eye, evoked a hearty thrill of sympathy and loyalty to him, manifested by a rattle of cheers all along the line of surprised spectators."

Fighting Wickham.

From To-day's Anzeiger.

Although in the appellative judicial district the Democrats in political elections have a considerable majority, yet we hope that there will be enough independent voters to turn the scale in favor of the man acknowledged to be the right one for the office and on whose nomination there is no stain. We wish to particularly impress upon the numerous readers of the Anzeiger in St. Charles, Warren and Lincoln counties that they should unite their votes to those of the independent voters of St. Louis and help elect Mr. Thompson. His election is desirable for two reasons: First, because he is a man thoroughly fitted for the position, while it is notorious that his opponent is not; and secondly, because the nomination of the Democratic candidate, Mr. Wickham, was only the work of a secret society of professed politicians, whose handiwork the sooner it is destroyed the better.

Distinguished Correspondents.

From To-day's Anzeiger.

The enterprising spirit of the POST-DISPATCH has succeeded in procuring for its paper two contributors of national reputation. The one is no less a person than the present Democratic Presidential candidate, Gen. Hancock, the other no less than the elected, but not acting President, Samuel J. Tilden. Both of them have telegraphically expressed their views to the POST-DISPATCH over the effect of the Maine election, in response to the telegraphic inquiry of the proprietor of the paper. Mr. Tilden, who in election matters is a shrewd and experienced man and has learnt to appreciate the truth of the proverb, "There is many a slip between the cup and the lip," expresses himself in respect to the election in Maine only in general and in cautious terms, that the event is "extremely favorable."

Republican Harmony.

From To-day's Westliche Post.

The tea party got away with the whisky party once more!

***

What influence the Westliche Post and what influence the Globe-Democrat has with our Republicans, yesterday's nominations for Governor and Judge of the Court of Appeals show!

***

That D. P. Dyer, for many years the partner of Henderson and his right hand in the breaking up of the Whisky Ring, should have received the Gubernatorial nomination yesterday, speaks volumes for the indescribable contempt which the Republicans of Missouri entertain for the politics of the Globe-Democrat.

The Negro Candidate on the Republican State Ticket.

From To-Day's Anzeiger.

The cultured individual is Howard Barnes, known to all old visitors of the State's capital as proprietor of a restaurant and an oyster saloon where good meals for Jefferson City may be procured. For many years he has owned the restaurant in the City Hotel of Mr. Knaup. Howard Barnes was born a slave, purchased his freedom from his master, who treated him humanely, and gradually with his earnings and savings brought his wife and child from slavery in which, the kindness of his master, it is true helped him. He has by degrees acquired a tolerable property and now belongs to the "highest taxed" in Jefferson City. He is also an estimable man, although he does not possess a single qualification for the office to which he has been nominated.

By Way of Amusement.

From the New York Tribune.

There was a little friendly gathering in one of the rural districts of Kentucky on Saturday. One boy was shot dead and four brothers were wounded, two of them mortally, all this being accomplished by two brothers named Smith. In Kentucky they call this a "picnic."

As a Substitute.

From the Philadelphia Times.

It's Blaine who must now come out with the regulation address telling how fraud and crime defeated him. It was generally expected that the other fellow would do it this year for Maine, but he has put Blaine in as his substitute for the occasion.

A Model Mother Gone.

From the Chicago Times.

It looks bad for St. Louis in 1890. A woman in that city has just died who was but thirty-seven years old and the mother of twenty-one children, of whom there were three pairs of twins, two sets of triplets, and four were born at one birth. Her last words were, "If your census didn't come out right don't blame me."

Not Faring Well.

From the Kansas City Times.

The editors of Missouri are not faring as well as they did two years ago. We observe that none of them thus far have been nominated for the Legislature. It is barely possible that they are going to content themselves with Legislative clerkships this session.

From the Courier-Journal.

Bob Ingersoll thinks that there may, after all, be a hell, and that it is located in the State of Maine.

No Stock in Maine.

From the Chicago Times.

PUBLIC OPINION.

A Penny Factory Wanted.

ST. LOUIS, September 16, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

It seems that St. Louis has little or no chance of securing a new Government mint. Perhaps it we can't have a full-blown Mint we can have a little one—one that will run exclusively on pennies. The demand for pennies is so great here that it strikes me that a factory with a capacity of about a bushel a day would have plenty to do. I am told that they are coming into general circulation and yet I haven't seen one in two weeks. It must be that the source is running dry. I am a believer in fractional currency, and if the Government won't supply us with needful pennies I am in favor of organizing a company in St. Louis and putting up works capable of producing them as fast, at least, as the children can loose them.

POOR RICHARD.

A Salvation Army Leader.

ST. LOUIS, September 16, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

Being a regular subscriber of your paper I saw daily your just strictures on Haskell. He used without right or authority the name of the Salvation Army. This is an organization in England which last year commenced to operate in this country. I wrote to them that they owed it to themselves to disavow any connection with Haskell. They wrote that Commissioner Railton, from England, was in the Southwest, and they would ask him to call as he went east, and they forwarded my letter to him. He wrote that he would stop here, and if I would get up a meeting he would address it on the work, design and history of the Salvation Army, in order indirectly to lead the public to discriminate. In the meantime Haskell has gone, but Railton does not know it and I have gotten up for him a meeting to-night, Thursday, in the Trinity Methodist Church, corner Tenth and North Market streets, at which Mr. Railton will speak on "The Masses and how they are reached by the Gospel in England and America by the Salvation Army." Respectfully,

J. W. MCINTYRE, 614½ Olive st.

WHO STOLE THE SHIRTS?

A Serious Charge Reflecting Upon the Firemen of St. Louis.

The Fire Laddies Accused of Plundering a Store During Monday Night's Conflagration.

A very grave charge is made against a member of the Fire Department present at the Scarritt furniture blaze on Tuesday. It is alleged that they broke into M. J. Murphy's gents' furnishing goods store, on Washington avenue, between Fourth and Fifth, and stole a large quantity of flannel shirts, underclothes, socks, etc., from the building. This is the first charge of the kind that has ever been made against the department, and no doubt its publication will be received with much indignation by the force, whose reputation and record have hitherto been altogether blameless. The facts as far as they are attainable are that Mr. Murphy stayed up at the store until after midnight on the evening of the fire, and then, being assured that there was no danger at all, he had the house carefully locked from garret to cellar and went home. About three o'clock in the morning Mr. Voigt, the son-in law of M. Ziock, who does business next door to Mr. Murphy, saw a fireman break open the fire latch of the skylight on Murphy's store and go in. As there was no occasion for this action, the fire being all out and the danger over, Mr. Voigt called Mr. Ziock and in a little time they saw a fireman come out with a large bundle of goods under his coat. This they could plainly see from where they were standing. Whether they will be able to identify the thief or not is a question which will come up in court. Mr. Murphy at once reported the case to Capt. Huebler, and the detectives are hard at work trying to find out who stole the shirts, and trying still harder to keep the case out of the papers. It is to be hoped that they will be more fortunate in the first than the last. Mr. Murphy states positively, from the position of the good, and the doors and windows opened, that this was a deliberate theft and not a yielding to sudden temptation. The shutter by which entrance had been effected was bolted from the inside after the man had come in, and he went out by an entirely different way.

The policeman whom Capt. Huebler had put upon the ground after the robbery states that the only men upon the roof were members of engine company No. 6 and hook and ladder No. 3. Whether it was a member of one of these corps, or a stranger, has not been divulged.

The action of one man ought to cast no reflection on the department. They are not responsible for what a black sheep in the fold may do, and it is quite certain that no body of men would be so quick to weed out a bad member of their body who was not straight as would the Fire Department.

It is the unanimous opinion of Mr. Murphy and the other gentlemen who know anything about the robbery that their case will be perfectly safe in Chief Sexton's hands, and they mean to leave the matter in his hands on his return.

BELLVILLE.

The Circuit Court will convene next week. A large amount of business is on docket for this term.

The Misses Amelia and Louise Bresler, who have been visiting relatives in Georgia during the summer and who were expected home this week, have been compelled in consequence of the illness of one of their friends to postpone their return for several days.

A grand mass meeting to ratify the national and State Democratic tickets will be held in Belleville toward the close of next week. There will be a torchlight procession and speeches will be delivered by Hon. Charles Johnson and Hon. Joseph Pulitzer, of St. Louis, and also several of the leading Democrats of Belleville and vicinity.

Last evening there was a Democratic rally in Belleville, which evoked much enthusiasm, and which was participated in by most of the local campaign organizations. After a parade through the principal streets of the town addresses were made in the public square by Hon. J. N. Perrin, candidate for the Legislature, Hon. J. M. Dill, Presidential Elector, and several others.

For some days past the Republican leaders in Belleville have been endeavoring to make a deal with the Democrats, the substance of their propositions being that they will cast their votes for Hancock and English provided the Democrats agree to support John B. Hay, the Republican candidate for Congress from the Seventeenth District, as against Hon. Wm. R. Morrison, the Democratic candidate. Several Democrats have been approached and this offer made, but in every case it has been rejected.

Berry's Billiards.

The renowned tragedian, Berry Mitchell, of whom every boy and girl in the city has heard, and with ambitious aspirations longed to emulate, has temporarily abandoned the footlights and adopted the green cloth. Not the cloth of that color which adorns the faro or hazard table, but he has entered upon a new life and is studiously cultivating a talent for billiards. He has just completed a match game with Clark, a member of the Comique orchestra, and as Berry is par excellence in everything he undertakes, Clark was, of course, ingloriously defeated. The game was 300 points up, and Clark managed to secure only 146 in the 81 innings played.

Both players were somewhat flurried and were compelled to accept outside consolation during the progress of the game, but Berry's Sampsonian locks carried him through to victory, while Clark, not being assisted with any such extraneous help, made breaks and lost the game but he is plucky and will try it over.

Fire on Bremen Avenue.

At about 11:30 to-day an alarm was sounded from box No. 76, corner of Bremen avenue and Seventeenth street, for a fire in the southeast corner. The department was promptly on hand, and extinguished the flames before material damage was done. The building on fire was a double two-story tenement house owned by Joseph Vornhulz and occupied by several families. The fire originated in the roof, from an unknown cause, none of the inmates having been aware of the danger in which they were. The building was damaged to the extent of about $300, and is insured in the American Central Insurance Company for two thousand dollars. The tenants, who have their own furniture, were not insured.

The Census Committee.

The census committee of thirty appointed by the president of the meeting on 'Change Monday met at 4 p. m. to-day in the Exchange Bank building. The necessary plans will be perfected and the reports to be presented at the meeting next Monday will be prepared.

Have they Split?

John J. Kirby, employed in the Comptroller's office, and Fred. Gerber, an employe of Collector Bosenblatt, both members of the Republican Central Committee, are said to have gone back on Clover and voted for Thompson at the direct request of Mr. Rosenblatt himself. It is said that Rosenblatt's order to his henchmen was a bid for the German vote, and that he and Filley have seriously "split" over the defection to Thompson.

A Texas Inquiry.

The Sheriff of Austin, Texas, has written to Chief McDonough inquiring if a man by the name of Cliff Cook had been divorced here. Inquiry at the Court-house developed the fact that the only Cook who had had the chains of matrimony severed was an N. C. Cook, who may or may not be the party.

MAINE.

No Doubt as to the Result—Plaisted Elected.

NEW YORK, September 16.—The National Democratic Committee have just received the following dispatch from Portland: Three hundred and sixty-four towns give Plaisted 65,995 and Davis 67,828; Republican majority, 1,833. In 1876 the same towns gave the opposition 55,382; Republican 70,497; Republican majority in 1876 15,115; Republican loss since 1876, 13,277. The 120 towns not yet heard from gave a considerable Democratic majority in 1876. There is no doubt of Plaisted's election.

For Congress, the contest between Lindley and Philbrick is close and doubtful.

W. H. Barnum, chairman of the Democratic Committee, says the latest information is to the effect that Plaisted has a clear majority of somewhere from 500 to 1,500.

CATTLE—There was a fair degree of activity in the Texas cattle market, and the moderate supply changed hands without difficulty. Prices were a little stronger. Local speculators and canners made fair purchases, and by the hour of noon the pens were cleared of stock. The range paid was from $2 35@3.25 per 100 lbs. Indian cattle in fair supply. Cows slow, as the quality was very common, and the same can be said of Southwest stock. In the native cattle department the market dragged, buyers being offish. Offerings moderate and mainly of common mixed to fair grades, which were slow in going off. Shippers and exporters wanted good and prime native steers, and as they could not get these were indifferent as regards buying medium stuff. Prices weak, with a downward tendency. Prime cattle firm in values and scarce. Milch cows with calves in fair supply and demand. Yesterday afternoon there was a good deal of activity, and sales made ranged at $2 50@5 00 per 100 lbs. Ruling quotations steady.

ON THE SEA.

A Post-Dispatch Correspondent on the Billowy Deep.

Life on Ship-board—A Bankrupt Party of Tourists—"There's No Place Like Home," After All.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

S. S. "ANCHORIA," ATLANTIC OCEAN, September 4.—Aboard this self-same "Anchoria," the very steamer whose name went through the length and breadth of both continents, a little less than three months ago, as the victim of a disaster which narrowly escaped being a fearful one, we have been sailing for nine long days toward the setting sun. Long days to many of our six hundred passengers, that is, for sea-sickness has, perhaps, an unusual hold upon those who are subject to its malign influence, during this somewhat nasty trip, as our English possengers call it. There have been but a couple of bright days among the nine, and not once has the sea taken on its most peaceful, mill-pond mood, which characterized it during so many days of our voyage over. But neither have we had what sailors call rough weather. We have not had the decks closed to us, with commands to stay in the saloons; nor yet, so far as I have heard, has any one been thrown out of his berth, as sometimes happens. But it has been just rough enough to make poor appetites and gloom for the many, and big appetites and glorious fun for the few. Just fancy being comfortably seated on deck in your lounging chair, your feet neatly tucked up in a rug, and a book in your hand, ready for use in that possible moment where the everlasting small talk of the ocean steamer shall wane. Round about are other comfortable individuals similarly arranged and equipped, while here and there are yet others who are more humbly located on the deck itself, possibly listening to poetry hummed into the bending ear. All is serene, the sky and sea are looking their best and the ship is rolling just enough to suggest the American rocking-chair, as you sway gently back and forth, when suddenly, puff! comes the wind, and lurch goes the vessel, and down to the railing of the sharply-inclined deck rolls and slides and tumbles the whole collection of animate and inanimate matter, while the exclamations of astonishment, shouts of laughter and smashing of stray plates and mugs from which invalids have been partaking of weak nourishment complete the charm of a scene which can never be reproduced on any other stage, and which one can only experience or observe by going to sea. Not the least comical feature of the entertainment are the frantic scrambles made by the gentlemen, in their vain attempts to rescue the ladies from the general miscellany.

Well, it is a charmingly delightful life, and these days on the ocean wave will be never forgotten by your correspondent, who, notwithstanding her direful five minutes on the English Channel three weeks ago, has found herself possessed of as vigorous a capacity for not missing a meal, for sleeping soundly, for promenading the decks indefinitely and for enjoying every moment of the voyage, as was the case during the trip over, three months ago. We happy mortals who are not ill do indeed have a glorious time at sea. Such amazing games of euchre as we have played, seated flat on the deck at the stern of the vessel, on the lee side of the wheel-house (the pretty stewardess has just informed me that "lee side" is the proper nautical term), with a shawl beneath us and another over our laps! Alas! that last game will probably never be finished; the score will always stand at six for partner and myself to two for the weak side, with "three and" on the interrupted game.

Such long, fascinating hours as we have idled in our chairs at the deck's edge, with the great circle of white-capped waters around us, and bright stars or cloud-veiled sun above us! And how many times has the determination to try the test of friendship suggested in that charming story "John Halifax, Gentleman," failed of fulfillment, because of the irresistible temptation which prevails on shipboard to talk continually, and to give golden silence no opportunity at all.

How many miles have we walked in the countless circlings of our somewhat limited hurricane deck, frequently inclining ourselves at very strange angles in our endeavors to keep even with those of the deck, and sometimes shooting off at comical tangents when an uncalculated lurch would come just as we were turning a corner. And when other places have become too crowded or too stale have we not stolen away to the prow of the boat, picking our way through the crowds of steerage passengers—a motley throng of over 400 poor people, most of whom have left their homes forever behind them in those far lands from which we sail—and being awakened from our dreams and longing looks towards the coming West, by an elfish little sailor with bright, black eyes, who suddenly emerges from some hiding place, whips a piece of chalk from his pocket and draws a line on the deck before us, across which, by the unspoken law for these cases made and provided, we cannot pass without paying toll. Arabella and I got chalked the other day, but we had to sneak out ignominiously, for in the pockets of London and Paris tradesmen reposes the money once our own, and so we shall not have it on our conscience that we aided and abetted the poor mariner in his vile appetite for whisky.

By the way, if there ever was a happy crowd of bankrupt individuals, it is our cabin passengers of the Anchoria. I'll venture to say that in the united pockets of all of us who are home-bound there remains not a score of pounds. Two ha'penny only can your correspondent call her own, but she rests, with a happy sense of security, upon the pass from New York to Boston, which she could not turn into British gold, and upon her friends for hack fares. I shall surely never forget the shouts of laughter and hand-shaking that have followed the accidental exchange of confidences among us as to the state of our respective money market. One highly-respectable clergyman is possessed of three shillings; a young New York millionaire had four when he came abroad, and the last shilling of a learned professor went over a chalk-line at the prow. But we have by no means been left to ourselves to provide our own amusement, for early in the voyage, as soon as the first stage of mal de mer was passed, a committee on entertainments was appointed, the chairman being Prof. W. A. Brownell, of New York, and their exertions have resulted in a series of evening programmes which have been thoroughly enjoyed by all, and of which the most memorable features were the fine readings given by Miss Hattie S. Tozer, a gifted and beautiful young elocutionist from Manchester, N. H., and the concert by the Anchoria Minstrels, novices at the burnt-cork profession, who made the whole ship ring with laughter and applause at their comicalities. We have also been greatly favored by several afternoon addresses by prominent divines on topics with which they are specially familiar, the finest of which was that on "The Relation of Science to Popular Thought," delivered by the Rev. Prof. Calderwood, of Edinburg University, whose works on mental philosophy are so well known in the scientific world. We have had religious services every morning, and frequently, also, the Rev. T. Clark, of Syracuse, N. Y., has led services in the steerage. On Sunday last the Right Rev. Bishop Fuller, of Niagara, conducted morning services, while in the afternoon several of our very numerous clergy participated.

There are not more than a score of Americans aboard the Anchoria, of whom but a half dozen are of the party with which you and I have made the tour of Europe, while the others are remnants of two Swiss parties. Some of our fellow travelers sailed the week before us, others the week after, and the rest remain in Europe for greater or lesser time.

Our voyage over has been an ideal one, but it is now in its last hours. Can it really end? Will all this summer's experience, all these last beautiful days become only memories, only dreams of a past that is utterly gone?

But my last bit of paper admonishes me to put no more conundrums, but to say good-bye—till Boston.

IDA CLARE.

A Heartless Swindle.

Canadencis (Pa.) Special Dispatch.

Barnett Woolbert, an old and industrious farmer, resides near Bossardsville, in Monroe county, Penn. He lives with his wife, who is also well advanced in years. Being in very moderate circumstances, several of Mr. Woolbert's children work away from home, and by this means help to support their aged parents. One of the daughters, Henrietta, works at a hotel in Pocomo Township, a few miles from her home. A son George has been working for some time in the lumber woods near White Haven, Penn. A few days ago a man of middle age, dressed in a striped coat and blue overalls, called at the hotel where Henrietta was working, and told her that he had sad news to impart to her. "I have been sent from White Haven here to inform you of the death of your brother George, who was instantly killed yesterday by being struck by a piece of rock flying from a blast." She asked the stranger if he would inform her parents of her brother's death. He said that he would, and started to go away. Having got a short distance he turned about, and, returning to Miss Woolbert, stated that he was out of money; that what he had he left in his sachel at Pocomo Switch, where he got off the train. She gave him some money, and he started on. As he turned away he took from his pocket a piece of twine, and remarked to Miss Woolbert that that was the measurement for her brother's grave.

The stranger then went to the home of the old folks, where he repeated the story of their son's death, after which he obtained from them some money upon the same plea that he had made to Miss Woolbert. When he broke the sad message to the aged couple, Mrs. Woolbert burst into tears and fell fainting into the arms of her husband. The stranger then gave them the measurement for the grave, and told them that the body would reach Fork's Station, on the Delaware, Lackawanna and Western Railroad, a few miles distant from where Mr. Woolbert lives, on the down train, the next day. He said that he would be at the depot when the train arrived. The grave was dug, a minister was called to conduct the funeral, and at the proper time the hearse and some friends of the family were waiting at the depot. When the train arrived there was nobody in it, and the stranger was nowhere to be seen. This excited suspicion. A telegram was sent to White Haven, and soon there came a reply that George was alive and at work as usual.

An Adventurous Voyage.

From the New York Herald.

The Berlin papers announce that at the beginning of October in the present year an ordinary sailing boat, well-known on the River Spree, will start from the Jannowitz Bridge for New York. The route will be along the Spree, the Havel and the Elbe to Hamburg, thence to Liverpool and from Liverpool across the Atlantic, while the boat will return through the West Indian Archipelago to Lisbon, and thence direct to Hamburg, the Elbe, Havel and Spree. Four months have been determined upon by the sanguine adventurers as a sufficient period for the daring voyage, which is for the first time to connect as sister ports the great cities of Berlin and New York. The first thought of the undertaking was due to a conversation at a dinner of the Berlin Sailing Club, on the successful ocean voyage of two Englishmen or Americans in a boat of sixteen feet in length. A Berlin banker, a leading member of the club, ventured the opinion that no German would dare to undertake such a voyage. The manager of a great place of entertainment in Berlin, who was formerly the captain of a German transatlantic steamer, propounded a wager that he would find German sailors and sportsmen who would not shrink from the attempt to journey all the way from Berlin to America in a little Spree sailing boat. The wager was accepted by the banker, and the sum fixed at 6,000 marks, which is to be paid on the day on which the boat lands its passengers, after the completion of their voyage, at the Jannowitz Bridge. There seems to be no lack of volunteers for the extraordinary adventure, and the National Zeitung states that a Naval Lieutenant and a Berlin journalist are accepted as two of the companions of this Prussian Odyssey. We are not yet informed as to the name of its Ulysses.

The Gentle and Pious Nun.

From the London Telegraph.

An appalling act of cruelty is reported from Pontremoli, in Italy. It appears that a female lay servant employed in the Carmelite convent of that name had been detected in the act of stealing some bread, the property of the sisterhood, and that for this offense she was tried about ten days ago, before an impromptu tribunal consisting of the Abbess and two of the senior nuns. Pronounced guilty, the sentence passed upon her by these pious ladies condemned her to "undergo the torments of purgatory." At once self-constituted judges and excutioners, the Abbess and her reverend coadjutors proceeded forthwith to enforce their barborous sentence in the following manner. Having conveyed their victim to a cell in which an iron stove stood out from the wall, they caused the stove to be heated in her presence, and then, tying her hands tightly together behind her back, held her face down for several minutes close to the surface of the glowing metal. Her struggles and heartrending entreaties for mercy were of no avail. The pitiless nuns, deaf to her outcries, protracted her martyrdom until her eyes had lost their sight forever and her whole face was converted into one huge blister. So profound was the horror generated throughout the sisterhood by this unheard-of torture that its perpetrators, despite conventual discipline, were denounced by several members of the community to the local authorities, who, after instituting a searching inquiry into the circumstances of the case, have consigned the Abbess and her confederate tormentors to prison, where they are now awaiting their trial.

Gold in Connecticut.

From the New York Times.

The "old California miner" who has recently been traveling through these United States, and who has discovered gold in most of them, as diligent readers of telegraphic dispatches are well aware, has at last struck it rich—it is circumstantially stated—in Windham county, Conn. Those familiar with that neighborhood know that there are so many rocks thereabout that, as a local saying goes, they have to sharpen the sheep's noses to let them graze, but the outcropping ledges have been hitherto generally regarded rather as barren nuisances than as sources of hidden wealth. Of late years Windham county has contained rather a manufacturing than an agricultural community, but for the sake of those who have kept up the unequal struggle against nature, and have held on to their fathers' farms, we could wish the story true. It is to be feared, however, that the mines are situated too near the buyers for the owners to really make much money by parting with them, and, of course, no one expects to make "big money" out of a mine by merely working it as such.

The Fall Bonnet.

From the Philadelphia Times.

Fair followers of fashion do not seem to contemplate that we may have some cold weather the coming season. The new fall bonnet is a marvel of nothing, tied together with nothing, trimmed with nothing and fastened to the head with a wonderful ribbon of any color calculated to set off the loveliness of the wearer. As little as there is to a thing of this sort it requires something like a dozen yards of ribbon and half a bushel of artificial flowers in its construction, but it is almost sweet enough to eat.

HARBOR MATTERS.

Improvements on the Levee—A New Survey—Collections for the Fiscal Month of August.

The river is falling rapidly, giving the Harbor and Wharf Department an opportunity to prosecute work prevented by the high water. The harbor boat has been busy for several days washing the heavy deposit from the levee at various points along the central wharf.

The extensive improvements at the foot of Rutger street are progressing. A new granite paving will be laid along the upper plane of the levee 800 feet in length and twenty-four feet wide, to make connection between the granite paving at the foot of Convent street and the improved wharf at a point 210 feet south of the south line of Rutger street. When completed the work will cost $6,000. The Barton street dump has long been in need of repairs, but for want of an appropriation the work could not be begun. It is expected that the necessary appropriation will be made at the next session of the Municipal Assembly, in which event the repairs will be made. A new approach to the Harrison street dump has been built and is now in use.

About November 1 Col. John G. Jopce, of the Harbor and Wharf Department, will begin an important survey with a view of locating Cabarat and Arsenal Islands and of determining the changes in the channel by sounding the sandbars and surveying the bank lines. The last survey was made in 1868 by W. E. Merrill, U. S. Engineer, who was secured by the city. Col. Joyce assisted at this survey.

For the fiscal month of August, ending September 13, claims amounting to $10,637 74 were turned over for collection by the Harbor and Wharf Department. The following are the accounts: Steamboats for use of wharf, $2,369 34; rents and wharfage on lumber, etc., $7,684 31; wharfage on wood $146; packet licenses, $443 39; total, $10,637 74.

Maps of St. Louis.

Mr. R. A. Campbell, the publisher, southeast corner of Olive and Fifth streets, has just issued two maps of St. Louis, which will prove of especial value during the cartographic work and have a street index printed in one corner. They also show the location of the various wards and have semi-circular lines showing the distance in miles of any point within the city limits from the Court-house. One of the maps is called the "Congressional," and thereon the three Congressional Districts are plainly defined in different colors. The other is "Senatorial and Representative," and shows the various Senatorial and Representative districts of the State, the former being distinguished by red and the latter by blue figures. But these maps are not only of value to the politician; they are of equal worth to the merchant and business man, as every street in the city can readily be found thereon.

Mr. Campbell has published a map of St. Louis which is at once simple and conveys all the information sought for at the first glance, and his enterprise should be appreciated.

Robbed in a Saloon.

While under the influence of benzine Jas. Hart strolled into a saloon in the vicinity of Sixth and Spruce streets last night. He was set upon by a crowd of roughs, who robbed him of $40. Officer Gardiner, who met him on Walnut street, listened to the disconnected story of the affair given by Hart, but could get no information of any use in working up the case. Hart was unable to say what saloon the robbery occurred in. He was locked up in the Chestnut street station to sleep off his drunk.

An alarm from box 47 at 3:35 this a. m. was turned on by Officer Henley for a fire in the stairway of No. 111 North Sixth street. The engines were on the ground in good time and extinguished the flames, which had badly scorched the stairs and rear door. Those Who Know Testify to Its Efficacy.

ST. LOUIS, September 15, 1880.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch:

DEAR SIR—For the benefit of suffering humanity and the hundreds of gentlemen friends of Eugene M. Morrison who may be adicted to the excessive use of alcoholic drinks, please publish the enclosed letter. By permission of the following well-known St. Louisans, who have had friends cured of dipsomania with my Gold Remedy and who will cheerfully testify to its infallibility, if used honestly as I direct, viz.: Hon. J. L. Don Morrison, Hon. Louis Dorsheimer, D. N. Burgoyne, Capt. F. F. Aden and Adolph C. Taylor. I could mention many others, but these are enough. Every mail brings in, similar letters to Mr. Morrison's, and thus far in the treatment of thousands of cases I have not failed to cure in a single instance where my remedy was used strictly as I direct.

Yours truly,
P. D. CORDELL.

MORRISONVILLE, Sept. 14, 1880.

Mr. P. D. Cordell:

If I ever have a desire for alcohol again, rest assured I will hasten to write for more of your remedy. With much respect and great gratitude, I remain,

Yours to command,
E. M. MORRISON.

The residence of Major Penn, at Houston, was burned on Wednesday morning about 2 o'clock. There was $2,600 insurance on the house and furniture. The fire is supposed to have been the work of an incendiary.

Deputy Sheriffs Gleason and Sheely, of Dallas, arrested two horse-thieves. Wednesday night about 10 o'clock they attempted to arrest three other horse-thieves at a house. Gleason was shot four times and seriously wounded. The thieves escaped.

A man named Piert was murdered by the Indians in the Nation, across the river from Clarksville, last Sunday. The affair took place at a camp-meeting, and was an unprovoked murder. Piert was a dangerous man, and had killed several men in the Nation.

A special from Milican to the Galveston News gives the particulars of a murder and lynching near that place. It seems that F. Peoples had been to to town on Saturday and upon returning to Mr. Holliday's farm, in the Brazos bottom, he accused Wash Talliaferro, a negro, of stealing some money and had him searched. Peoples had been drinking. The negro awaited his opportunity, secured an axe, and, approaching Peoples from behind, dealt him a blow, burying the axe in his neck and shoulder. He then crushed in the skull of his victim and escaped. A posse followed and captured Wash near Independence between six and seven o'clock on Sunday evening. They returned to Rogers' farm and placed Wash in the convict prison. Late in the night forty or fifty armed men demanded and took the prisoner, carrying him to within three miles of Milican, where they hung him to a limb and dispersed.

1880. A MODEL MODERN NEWSPAPER 1880.

THE POST-DISPATCH

Of St. Louis.

DAILY AND WEEKLY EDITIONS

Consolidation of Three Newspapers in One.

The Evening Dispatch,
The Evening Post,
The Evening

LEADING EVENING PAPER of the WEST.

A Democratic Journal Devoted to the Interests of Missouri.

PROSPECTUS FOR 1880.

The POST-DISPATCH has been and will be a Newspaper in the true sense of the word. It owns the exclusive membership and franchise in the Associated Press. In is in constant telegraphic communion with all parts of the habitable Globe. Its Correspondents are at all the principal Fountains of News, and spare neither Money, Labor nor Brains to be the EARLIEST, the most COMPLETE and the most RELIABLE Historians of the Incidents and Accidents of the Day throughout the World. It will maintain its Excellent Record of being the Most Thorough and the Most Accurate Chronicle of the Local Happenings of St. Louis, enjoying, as it does, facilities for gathering information which are not shared by any other journal in the city.

Editorially it will continue to urge good, old-fashioned Democracy as the only Rational System of Government, and in the coming struggle between IMPERIALISM and FREE INSTITUTIONS it will be found at all times in the lead, fighting the Battle of the People beneath the Standard of Law, Liberty and Local Self-Government. Though Democratic, our Democracy is preceded by an allegiance to Truth and Honesty, and, once convinced that truth to itself or honesty to the public demand it, it has proved in the past that it will spare neither censure nor rebuke within or without the party when it deems them necessary. Its principles are tolerably familiar to the people of the State, as they have been repeatedly and frankly stated, and on every question from hard, sound Money to Western Improvements everybody knows that a definite position has been taken and held.

THE WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH.

The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has been established to be to Missour what the Daily is to St. Louis, and the manner in which it has been taken up—evidenced by the surest of all testimony, the subscription list—shows that a progressive, enterprising, live Newspaper can command success in itself, without adventitious aid, and with no recommendation except that of innate and superior merit. The WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH has already become an institution which Missourians cannot afford to do without, for, in the character of its news and the practical value of all its matter, it is almost a necessary household article to every farmer or merchant in the country. The markets are brought down to the very moment of going to press, just a day ahead of any morning contemporary, for, in the nature of things, a paper printed in the morning cannot contain as late news as a paper printed in the evening and going out by the same evening's mail. The importance of this one consideration, were there no other, would be enough to place the WEEKLY POST-DISPATCH far beyond any competitor, for a day's intelligence from a fluctuating market may save or make a business. The Weekly is specially edited to give a complete history of the week brought down to 4 o'clock of the day of issue, each subject having its carefully considered space, and its proper application to the business, the domestic, or the social wants of its readers.

The year of our Lord 1880 opens with a promise of solid prosperity, the like of which has not been known since the War. The piping times of Peace in all their fullness and plenty foster industry and enterprise in the land. Every wheel that turns, and every share that rolls the mellow loam up to the ripening sun, is driven by the sturdy arm of a citizen whose vote will be cast in this crisis-year either to make this happy promise a permanent reality of true popular self-government, or to see in its stead a sham Republic, with its attendants of a military, personal, centralized Government, eternal sectional strife and certain Mexicanization.

The POST-DISPATCH will appeal during the coming year to the conscience and patriotism of all true Americans who would keep the sacred and revered fires of Liberty alight to rally to its support during a season which will witness the bitterest and the most important Political Canvass which the American Republic has been yet called upon to enter.

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

The POST-DISPATCH will be delivered by carriers to any part of the city or sent by mail, postage prepaid, to subscribers in any part of the Union, on the following terms:

Daily, per week	20 cents.
Daily, per month	85 cents.
Daily, three months	$2 50

CARONDELET JOTTINGS.

"Time Tries All" at Society hall to-night. The Reber Brothers are the programmed musicians of the occasion.

The Republicans of Carondelet appear to be well satisfied with the work of the convention yesterday and pretend to be quite confident of electing the candidate for the Court of Appeals.

The wife of Rev. Dr. Ingraham, who has been dangerously ill for some time, was this morning thought to be out of danger. Her many friends here and elsewhere will rejoice to hear of her prospect of speedy recovery.

The case of Mrs. John Degnan for disturbing the peace at the bar room attached to the residence of Mr. Barlow was continued this morning until Monday next. The case, if tried, promises something rich, rare and racy in the the way of developments.

An appeal has been taken in the case of Hodo vs. Benike, an employe of the Missouri Zinc Furnace Company. The company was made a party to the suit and included in the judgment rendered by Justice Spies, the claim being for a board bill. An appeal bond was filed this morning by the company.

The suit of Fazley vs. Vail Brothers resulted in setting aside the attachment of the stock, which has for some time been in the hands of the constable. A judgment, however, was rendered in favor of the plaintiff for $102. An execution was immediately issued and the goods formerly attached were at once levied upon and are now advertised for sale. It is probable, however, that an appeal will be taken by the Vails.

Fair Ground Notes.

The Fair Grounds office, on Chestnut street, is crowded continually, and the prospects for an unprecedented success grow brighter every day. The sale of booths will take place at the Fair Grounds on Monday, September 27, at 10 o'clock a. m.

In order to afford visitors from other places every facility, a number of the merchants have concluded to establish two depots for the accommodation of those desiring to stop at boarding houses during the exposition. Boarding house keepers will be notified to leave their addresses at either of the depots, and as soon as a stranger applies for a stopping place he can be directed to one. These depots will be located opposite the Union Depot and the Lindell Hotel. A source of great annoyance to Secretary Kalb is the frequent visits of ladies who have textile fabrics for exposition. They bring their bundles to the office and wish to deposit them. The only thing they have to do at the office is to make their entries, and the sooner they do this the better for themselves. Their articles for exposition must be taken to the grounds.

Car Painters' Convention.

The Master Car Painters' Convention reassembled at 9 o'clock this morning, President Bobertson, of Detroit, in the chair. The afternoon session of yesterday was taken up in the discussion of various subjects pertaining to car-painting, and this morning the debate was resumed. The first question discussed was "Which makes the best foundation for a dark-colored car body, iron or lead paint?" Mr. H. C. Burch, of the Wagner Car Works, West Albany, New York, introduced the subject by reading a paper. Each member of the society afterwards expressed his views, which were about equally divided between the use of mineral and lead paint as a foundation. A number of other kindred subjects were introduced and debated.

The members of the convention this afternoon took carriages for a jaunt through the city and the parks.

EX-GOV. FLETCHER

Nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the First District.

Report of the Convention To-Day at Union Park Hall.

A nice little cut and dried convention was held at Union Park Hall this morning in the First Congressional District, and ex-Gov. Thos. C. Fletcher appointed to head the November dress parade against the Democratic forces. Gen. Geo. H. Shields had volunteered his services and made the nominating speech, occupying fifteen minutes in eulogy of the candidate, whom he spoke of as a tried soldier and a true statesman. The tenor of the other speeches was a claim that the district was close, and that, with the Socialistic and the Greenback parties out of the way, the district was probably Republican.

THE CONVENTION.

The convention was called to order by ex-Gov. Thos. C. Fletcher, chairman of the First District Congressional Committee, who contented himself with reading the call for the convention and naming the Hon. John Monteith for temporary chairman. Mr. Monteith made an extended speech about the Solid South, rebel brigadiers, slavery, the strong virtues of the Republican party and arraigned the Democracy in the usual manner.

Dr. J. N. Franke, a prominent candidate for Coroner, was given a little boom by being made the temporary chairman. The necessary committees were then appointed as follows:

Ste. Genevieve county, F. B. Whitledge.
Jefferson county, H. Hammel.
Washington county, Jas. Deggendorf.

A recess was taken to give the committees opportunity to work. There were no contesting delegations.

PERMANENT ORGANIZATION.

Upon reassembling Mr. E. A. Kirby, as chairman of the Committee on Permanent Organization, reported as the officers of the convention:

President—John H. Monteith.
Vice-presidents—Dr. Fred. Hill and Leo Rassieur of St. Louis, Henry Schwauer of Madison, Louis Bogy of Ste. Genevieve, Wm. R. Pearson of Washington.
Secretary—V. B. S. Reber, of St. Louis; assistant, W. S. Rozier, of Ste. Genevieve.

The committee recommended as the expression of political faith upon the part of the convention the adoption of the State platform as promulgated by the State Convention of yesterday.

NOMINATING FLETCHER.

Gen. George H. Shields, nominated Gen. Thomas C. Fletcher in a well delivered speech, which was mainly an abstract of the familiar record of ex-Gov. Fletcher as a Union officer and as chief executive of this State. Gen. Shields accredited Gen. Fletcher with the present perfection of the school system, the value of Missouri bonds and other things that Missourians are proud of.

Whitledge, of Ste. Genevieve, seconded the nomination in good style, and Leo Rassieur also delivered a stump speech, in which he tore the Democratic party "all to pieces," to the great satisfaction of the convention.

Mr. Monteith also seconded the nomination.

A man from Madison county, named Schwauer, went through a pantomime that was a contingent of a speech delivered in an inaudible voice.

On motion of Mr. T. H. Thomas, of St. Louis, the nomination was made unanimous, and cheers were given. Messrs. Hill, Rankin and Shields were appointed a committee to go down stairs and find Governor Fletcher and surprise him with the news of his nomination. While the committee was absent Major J. C. McGinness entertained the convention with a denunciation of the last redistricting of the State, which made the First District reliably Democratic.

THE NOMINEE ACCEPTS.

The entrance into the hall of the nominee was the signal for applause and cheers. General Fletcher gracefully returned his thanks in a speech utterly free of partisan bias. It was simply an essay upon the mechanical and industrial possibilities of the First District, and a pledge, if elected, to further these interests.

NEW CONGRESSIONAL COMMITTEE.

A new Congressional committee was then appointed as follows:

Jefferson county—E. C. Rankin.
Washington county—W. T. Hunter.
Madison county—Wm. McCann.
St. Francois county—P. C. Brady.
Ste. Genevieve County—T. B. Whitledge.
St. Louis County—A. J. Shores.
Old First Ward—Louis Zepp.
Old Second Ward—T. C. B. Tiedeman.
Old Third Ward—Gerald H. Barth.
Old Thirteenth Ward—V. B. S. Reber.
Members at large—Judge Nicholas Berg, of St. Louis, and W. S. Rozier, of Ste. Genevieve.

The committee subsequently organized by electing Judge Nicholas Berg chairman, T. C. P. Tiedeman, secretary, and Messrs. Rankin, Shores and Barth an executive committee, of which the president and secretary are members.

CHEAP RATES.

What the Railroads Will Do for St. Louis During Fair Week.

No More Five-Dollar Excursions to Be Given.

Ever since the encampment of the Knights Templar at Chicago the people of St. Louis have been thoroughly dissatisfied with what they have thought an unjust discrimination against them. With the near approach of the annual Fair and the pageant of the Veiled Prophets, it was felt that these attractions were amply sufficient to attract immense throngs to the city if the matter of transportation could be fixed on anything like a cheap basis. The Fair is acknowledged to be the leading one of the kind in the States, and the Prophets' carnival is fully up to the standard of anything of the kind ever attempted in America. With a week's attraction of this kind, especially, as in the case of Chicago, a large portion of the crowd are attracted altogether by the cheap fare and the novelty of witnessing a strange city. A meeting of the prominent merchants and business men of the city was held two weeks ago, and as a result of the deliberations a committee of three was appointed for the purpose of securing the cheapest transportation possible. It was the expectation of the meeting that excursions on the same plan as those to Chicago, with fare at $5 from about the same points, would be obtained. The committee consisted of Mr. Charles Green, President of the Fair Ground Association, Mr. E. C. Simmons and Mr. Sam. Dodd. Afterwards Mr. A. A. Talmage, of the Missouri Pacific, and Mr. John C. Gault, General Manager of the Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway, were added. The committee found that the railroads had positively set their faces against any such excursion as the one just mentioned. There was neither pleasure nor profit in it for them. All the arrangements of the different roads were upset during the convention. The rolling stock was taxed far beyond its capacity. Freight traffic was entirely suspended, and merchandise in vast quantities lay sandwiched in and side-tracked for days through lack of means of transportation, thus seriously incommoding both the roads and the shippers. The various trains, loaded far above what they ought to be, were compelled to creep along at a snail-like pace, for the purpose of avoiding accidents which were almost inevitable. The merchants' committee pressed the point that the favor shown to Chicago, should be duplicated in the case of this city, but the unvarying answer was that the roads had all given the $5 excursions a fair, square trial and that they would have nothing more to do with them. Besides if the claim of St. Louis was granted, Cincinnati, Indianapolis and such point would have a perfect right to make the same demand and would as little like a negative answer. What the committee was particularly desirous of was lighter fares from distant points, the rates near to home being already satisfactory. It was found impossible to obtain the $5 rates which were first demanded. "In fact," said Mr. Hargadine, of Crow, Hargadine & Co., "it is impossible for the merchants to arrange this matter themselves. The fare to Chicago was secured by the intervention of the Masonic orders, and would have been granted in no other way." The committee, however, succeeded in obtaining rates much cheaper than any that have been granted so far, and the arrangements, while not what were first expected, are nevertheless very liberal, and will, when combined with the great attractions of the week, succeed in thronging the town as it never was before. The following roads will sell round trip tickets to St. Louis for one fare from the points mentioned: The Wabash, St. Louis and Pacific Railway has agreed to sell round trip tickets for one fare from Kansas City, Council Bluffs, Omaha and Ottumwa. The Chicago and Alton and the Ohio and Mississippi Railways have made the same rates from Chicago, Cincinnati, Louisville and Indianapolis. The St. Louis, Kansas City and Northern will convey visitors on like terms from Burlington, Quincy, Keokuk and Hannibal. The Iron Mountain and the Cairo Short Line have made the same arrangements in regard to Cairo, Memphis, Nashville, Houston, Austin, Toledo. All these roads will commence selling tickets at all the points mentioned above upon Friday, October 1st, and will continue selling upon Saturday and Sunday. The tickets will be good returning until Monday, October 11th, inclusive.

These rates seem to be satisfactory to the merchants and business men generally. Mr. E. C. Simmons, who was most enthusiastic about the $5 fares, is satisfied after hearing the railroad side of the question, that the arrangement made is the best possible. Said Mr. Simmons: "Under the liberal arrangement the roads will get all they are able to handle, and the crowds in attendance will be largely increased, without the danger and disarrangement attending their previous excursions. The roads could not manage all they would get under the other arrangement, and they have been perfectly fair to us, while of course not wishing to take such immense risks over again." A reporter went around among the business men and conversed with Mayor Overstolz, Mr. Hargadine, Sam. Dodd, E. O. Stanard, Charles E. Slayback, Jas. Franklin, and many others, and found that they were all thoroughly interested in making this the most largely attended as it will be the best, Fair St. Louis ever saw. A lodging bureau has been provided to furnish all necessary information and accommodations for visitors, and the vast throngs that visit St. Louis next month will be suitably provided for and entertained.

Another New Paper.

A new weekly paper is announced to be issued next Saturday from the well-known publishing house of G. I. Jones & Co., 212 Pine street. It is to be called the Spectator, and is to be somewhat literary in its character. In politics it will be independent, and will treat society in a manner altogether new. It is said to have quite a formidable corps of contributors, some of whom are understood to be regular writers on the daily St. Louis press. All that is necessary to be said as to the success of the new venture is that there are always readers for a good paper.

First District Police Court.

Twenty-three of the thirty-four cases docketed in this court to-day were continued. Cases against Mary Fischer, Tony Wall, Jas. Starr and Carl Snumann were dismissed. For trespassing, Julia Ryan was fined $10. David W. Foster was fined $25 for gambling. Henry Ensow was assessed costs on the same charge. Lizzie Bowman, an inmate of a disorderly house, was fined costs. Harry Cleary and Kate McMahon were fined costs on charges of drunkenness on the street.

LARGE gongs similar to those used by the Fire Department have been placed on the city ambulances. The funny map of the Health Department says that hereafter the ambulances will go to fires on a gallop to get the fire laddies to the Dispensary before they get hurt.
